Case No. FL-2023-00013

Reed Rubinstein
America First Legal Foundation
611 Pennsylvania Avenue, SE, #231
Washington, DC 20003

Dear Mr. Rubinstein:

As we noted in our letter dated April 28, 2023, we are processing your request for material under the Freedom of Information Act (“FOIA”), 5 U.S.C. § 552. The Department of State (“Department”) has identified an additional 73 responsive records subject to the FOIA. We have determined that all 73 records may be released in part.

An enclosure explains the FOIA exemptions and other grounds for withholding material. Where we have made redactions, the applicable FOIA exemptions are marked on each record. Where applicable, the Department has considered the foreseeable harm standard when reviewing these records and applying FOIA exemptions. All non-exempt material that is reasonably segregable from the exempt material has been released and is enclosed.

We will keep you informed as your case progresses. If you have any questions, your attorney may contact Kevin Bell, U.S. Department of Justice Trial Attorney, at kevin.k.bell@usdoj.gov and (202) 305-8613. Please refer to the case number, FL-2023-00013, and the civil action number, 22-cv-03386, in all correspondence about this case.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Diamonece Hickson". The signature is fluid and cursive, written over a large, diagonal red watermark.

Hi Alanna,

Thank you for an excellent panel presentation at yesterday's IAF event! Just sending a quick note so that you have my contact information again. It would be great to set up something later in July between myself and (b)(6) (from State's Bureau of Near Eastern Affairs, Office of Press and Public Diplomacy) to get a better sense of your footprint in the MENA region.

Separately, I also recommended to (h)(6) that he encourage the U.S. Embassy in Tunis to apply against the internal small grant funding opportunity that I spoke about yesterday. You mentioned that post did not have funding to continue supporting local Tunisian partners - this is at least a potential option for them. That application window closes next Friday at midnight - no action needed from your side since post will need to be the one to submit the proposal.

Thanks,

Hi Baybars

HAICA is considered politically independent and a leader in the space, so we think that it fits the bill.

Is there an issue with Poynter reaching out to HAICA directly in order to gain an understanding of their activities and practices? Ultimately, you need to feel comfortable with the organization's orientation vis a vis Poynter's mission.

Hi Erica,

Thanks for the response.

I was wondering if you can elaborate a bit more on your feedback regarding HAICA's independency vis-a-vis their constitutional status given our criteria for membership eligibility seeks fact-checking organizations to be independent of any political influence.

I'm sharing the specific two criterions to provide more context

"If the organization receives funding from a local or foreign state or political sources, it provides a statement on its site setting out to the satisfaction of the IFCN, how it ensures its funders do not influence the findings of its reports"

"The applicant is not as an organization affiliated with nor declares or shows support for any party, any politician or political candidate, nor does it advocate for or against any policy positions on any issues save for transparency and accuracy in public debate."

Given your knowledge on HAICA and our requirements, do you think they would be a good fit?
Thanks a lot
Baybars

Hi Baybars,

I am transitioning out of post, so I will leave my colleagues Erica and Mary to respond to this officially. I think the HAICA proposal looks promising and that it is worth serious consideration.

(My only issue with the proposal is that they have the Covid timeline in Tunisia wrong.) It appears to dovetail with another project supported by the Embassy / GEC on Counter disinformation and propaganda on the Covid-19 pandemic in Tunisia. Our grantee is the Grande Ecole de la Communication (GEC) which is working with the Tunisian Ministry of Health.

Hope this finds you in a good health.

Just wanted to kindly remind my inquiry about your thoughts on HAICA from Tunisia as a potential local partner for our training engagement in the country.

I'm sharing two documents that I've received about the organization (via UNDP) and kindly asking your feedback on their status and eligibility to be a good partner for this project.

Looking forward to hearing from you.

Thanks a lot for this introduction, [REDACTED] Happy to be connected.

Gaby, we are lacking a trainee organization in Tunisia to kick off the trainings. Dogruluk Payi from Turkey will be our regional partner in those trainings, therefore will be providing guidance and support throughout the implementation of the engagement.

We like to hear your thoughts and guidance on identifying a Tunisian newsroom and/or non-profit organization to engage with and train them to be eligible for the International Fact-Checking Network's Code of Principles.

Baybars,

I hope you are doing well! I'm touching base with you regarding the Tunisia portion of your IFCN program. I understand from your recent amendment that Poynter still seeks a local Tunisian organization with whom to partner.

May you provide our public affairs officer at the U.S. Embassy in Tunis with an update on where things stand regarding Tunisia by open of business tomorrow (Thursday)? Her name is Gabby Price and her email is (b)(6)@state.gov. She is already aware that you and IWPR will reach out with an update and to begin coordinating on potential local implementers. The embassy likely can assist you in your search.

Please cc myself, Vonda, Alan, and (b)(6)@state.gov from our Near Eastern Affairs Bureau on your email. I ask with urgency because Gabby is leaving her position within the next several days. She would like to brief her successor on all pending projects to avoid any disconnect or confusion that the transition may cause. It would also be useful for you to mention that you've identified Doğruluk Payı -- the Turkish fact-checking organization -- as the one who will be connected with the Tunisian organization TBD.

Thank you again, and I do hope you and your family are remaining healthy these days.

Kindly,

Hello,

I'm a national security reporter with The Washington Post and have covered information operations, cyber and intelligence issues.

We're working on a story with a quick turnaround (needs to be edited by tomorrow afternoon) that assesses the strengths and potential pitfalls of Ukraine's remarkable information campaign during its war with Russia.

I understand that Daniel Kimmage is researching a related topic at NDU –on Russian and Soviet disinformation, and he's a noted expert on the subject.

Could you arrange for me to speak with him –even on background—so that our readers may have the benefits of his insights –even if not attributed to him by name?

We would be ever so grateful.

Hi Matt,

Following up on the conversation last week, below are GEC's responses to the two taken questions.

These responses are provided on deep background.

Q1. How are people getting to these sites? Google? Etc

The majority of users accessing these four sites go to the site directly. For greater context, we have outlined the traffic for each of the four sites below. This data captures traffic for the full month of September from SimilarWeb, a publicly available tool.

Definitions:

Direct traffic occurs when a visitor arrives directly on a website by typing in the website's URL, without having clicked on a link on another site or using a search engine.

Referral traffic describes the people who come to a domain from other sites, without using a search engine.

Search traffic refers to the visitors who arrive at a website by clicking search results leading to that particular website (mostly after searching keywords or phrases).

Social traffic is traffic from social media outlets.

- NEO: 79% direct traffic; 8.5% referral traffic (mostly from other alternative media); 7.7% traffic from search; 3.7% social traffic (43.6% from Facebook)
- Oriental Review: 55.5% direct traffic; 13.3% referral traffic (83% from news aggregator Inoreader); 21.4% from search traffic; 9.7% social traffic (56% from Twitter)
- News Front: 63.9% direct traffic; 13.5% referral traffic (33% from Russian search engine Yandex; other traffic from news aggregators and websites); 5.9% from search traffic; 9.8% social traffic (56.8% VKontakte)
- Rebel Inside: Not available on SimilarWeb.

Q2. Are we seeing lots of Spanish speaking audiences targeted from these sites?

News Front is the only one of the four entities we outlined that directly targets Spanish speaking audiences. News Front has a dedicated Spanish-language proxy site and claims that the site's editorial branch is based in Spain. In addition, we see that News Front targets Spanish speaking audiences on the Russian social media platform VKontakte. The page self identifies as being located in Madrid, Spain and has 1,633 followers. News Front's Spanish-language no longer has any pages on Twitter, Facebook and YouTube because they all have been suspended by the platforms.

Happy to discuss any proposal to move something to "on background."

Finally, could you give some idea about when you are looking to publish?

Best,

Hi Kylie, I have the following for you, attributable to a State Department spokesperson:

- As a general matter, we don't comment on Congressional correspondence.
- In general, the U.S. Government is committed to helping the Iranian people freely access information via the internet. In furtherance of this commitment, which the Iranian government has consistently denied to its people, last Friday OFAC issued General License (GL) D-2 to expand the scope of authorized exports to Iran of software and services incident to the exchange of communication over the internet.
- We are holding discussions with a wide range of U.S. technology companies on an urgent basis so that they can understand what the General License means and to take their questions, but we're not able to share details of those conversations at this time.

Hi –

Two members of congress are urging the State Department to help “facilitate the transfer” of Starlink satellite internet terminals to Iran in order to get internet up and running in the country amid widespread protests and internet shutdowns by the Iranian government.

"We believe the Global Engagement Center within the Department of State can help facilitate the transfer of their terminals to non-governmental organization partners to ensure the Iranian people have the freedom to communicate with each other and share their concerns to the world," wrote Republican Reps Michael Waltz and Maria Salazar in a joint letter to Secretary of State Tony Blinken this week.

Does State have a response to the letter? Is it possible for the GEC to do this?

Thanks!

Hi Baybars,

Great to e-connect with you! My colleague (h)(6) and I were discussing with (b)(6) on possible resources/training that may be available for some of our public affairs posts in East Asia Pacific that work with a small press corp. They are particularly interested in ways to connect local journalists with resources that help in fact checking, combating mis/disinformation, and access to other journalist/news networks.

It would be great to hear some of the projects IFCN is working on and if there may be opportunities we can work together to help some of our smaller posts.

Thanks again for your help.

Hoping this finds you well. A few colleagues from our Office of Public Diplomacy within the Bureau of East Asian and Pacific Affairs (EAP), (b)(6) cc'd, reached out to our team at GEC on an ongoing discussion to coordinate a potential upcoming November engagement within Southeast Asia.

I wanted to connect you two due to IFCN's leading experience in this space generally, but also, I understand Poynter may have supported a Google News Lab training in Singapore in 2018 that received GEC support -- this seems like a natural nexus and if you might be able to provide some insights to my colleagues and their questions I'd be much obliged.

I hope this connection is fortuitous for you all. I'll leave it to my EAP colleagues to take it from here. (b)(6) over to you.

Subject: Opportunity for Marshall Islands Journal to join the New York Times Content Project

Aloha Ms. Goodman:

I hope you are keeping healthy and enjoying this holiday season. I am writing to you as the East-West Center is administering a project for the Department of State which provides licensing agreement to use New York Times content in select Pacific Islands newsrooms. The funds are drawn from the GEC Information Access Fund which we are accessing through a sub-award with the Institute for War and Peace Reporting. We would like to make this opportunity available to the both the Cook Islands News and Television Niue if you think that these outlets would be open to the opportunity and a worthy recipients of the license. The year-long license (valued at (b)(4)) would allow those media outlets to republish New York Times content (in both English and Mandarin languages) in their hardcopy and online presence (if any).

If you think that Cook Islands News & TV Niue would be appropriate would you be willing to make the first approach to introduce their executives to the idea? (b)(6) our GEC contact at INDOPACOM, prefers that approach instead of the EWC directly reaching out, if you are willing. Myself and our contact at the New York Times will follow-up your initial query with practical details.

At the end of this email I've included some boilerplate language used by other embassies to contact media outlets. Feel free to use verbatim or customize to your circumstances.

Thanks very much for your help. Stay safe and happy holidays.

Best regards,
Scott Kroeker

My name is XXXXX and I work with the US Embassy in XXXX it's my pleasure to E-meet you.

I'd like to bring your attention to an opportunity to access content for your publication, the XXXXX.

The U.S. Embassy is offering your news outlet the opportunity to be part of our New York Times English & Mandarin content project. We know that many small and medium size news outlets would like to use content from larger outlets, and, that content in Mandarin for occasional Mandarin language supplements is also helpful.

We are pleased to announce a new project for select news outlets in the Pacific:

- 1) free usage license for New York Times English and Mandarin content for at least one year,
- 2) custom training from the New York Times on their website (so you can most easily access the content you want, and on-going technical support),
- 3) quarterly webinars with prominent international journalists on relevant topics to the Pacific facilitated by the East-West Center, and

4) customized training organized by the East-West Center on specific topics you deem most important to your newsroom.

We hope you will join us in this project! If you are interested, we would like to connect you with Scott Kroeker from the East-West Center, who will be organizing logistics."

Just following up again on this. Any luck shaking the trees to get the planned outlets on-board with this project? If they aren't responsive or interested I think we've done sufficient diligence over the past 6+ weeks. With the multiple unsuccessful outreaches made by your office, the East-West Center and New York Times, perhaps we should move on to some other options. I've previously provided some other possible outlets to DoS/GEC for consideration and would like to proceed with outreach to them starting next week if you're OK with it. Also happy to hear if you have other outlet suggestions in the countries under your purview beyond the Island Sun in the Solomon Islands I mentioned previously. Let us know.

Subject: Media outlets for New York Times Project

Aloha (b)(6)

I wanted to update you on our outreach efforts to media outlets in PNG, Solomons and Vanuatu since it's been a struggle to get people to respond to our offer of New York Times content licenses.

Of the 9 media outlets originally proposed for the project by your Embassy we have been able to bring on-board only 4. These are:

- The Bougainvillean
- EMTV
- Solomon Star
- Vanuatu Daily Post

At least we've gone one in each country. Of the other 5 here are the results of our outreach:

- PNG Loop – Referred us to their parent organization in Fiji who we hoped would sign on but they eventually declined the offer.
- Post Courier – Contact provided, Todagia Kelola, responded that he was no longer in charge of full editorial duties and referred the offer to Managing Director, Kevin Smith and acting Editor and General Manager Frank Genaia. Repeated outreach to both of them has produced no response at all.
- SIBC – Contact provided, Fred Osifelo, responded that he had forwarded the offer to the GM and that he didn't hear back. After repeated efforts, including using personal contacts to find out the correct email address for the GM Ronald Buaoka (all website emails bounce back) we have received no response.
- FM100 & The National – No response at all. I activated East-West Center media alum Belinda Kora from the PNG Media Council--she used to run the newsroom at FM100 and is still very well connected--who tried to get them to respond to no avail.

A similar thing happened with outlets in Fiji and Post was able to identify a couple of other outlets that were ready and willing to take this on board. Since we still have funding for 4 licenses and our funder the GEC is potentially open to alternatives IF the preferred outlets just don't come on-board do you have any suggestions for different outlets in your 3 countries? How about the Island Sun in Solomons which is run by an EWC media alum Priestly Habru. Or would you prefer to take another stab at squeezing answers out of the original outlet? Let me know.

Thanks
Scott

We were wondering if it would be easier to just set up a call and ask those questions or emailing the questions would be a better way to answer them? What is your experience approaching this?

If a call is a way to go then can we set up something this week?

Looking forward to hearing from you.

Dear (b)(6)

Thank you for reaching out regarding M&E for the Balkans and Pacific Islands. Sorry for the late reply. We were just waiting for some internal updates regarding a meeting with our National Board of Advisors. My colleagues and I were tasked in running a few of the meetings that are set through this Thursday and Friday.

We were wondering if we can set a date early next week. We can for sure move things around for Monday need be.

As for activities for the two regions :

We have made some headway with the Pacific Island Grant. We have identified the local partner that will be partnering up with and they are currently underway preparing the localized materials for the training sessions.

As for the Balkans, we are still at the very beginning. We have identified potential partners and have had our introduction meetings and will more to work off of at the end of this month.

Looking forward to hearing from you.

Thank you for all the support.

Best,

Ferdi

Hi! Thank you for reaching out!

Would next Friday work? I'm free anytime after 11am except 3-4pm EST.

Before we meet, can you tell me where your projects are at and what M&E work you've done so far? Also, are you just looking for a walk through of the M&E Workbook/Performance Monitoring Plan? Is there anything else you'd like to accomplish during our call?

Thanks!

Hi, Megan –

I am working on a story looking at how Russian propoganda and disinformation around the Ukraine war is thriving in eastern European countries like Hungary, Bulgaria, Serbia, Slovakia, etc. I was hoping to touch base with someone at the GEC to talk a little bit about the efforts there to combat this, and which countries GEC might be most concerned about. Would love to chat with someone on this, and I also haven't really had the chance to introduce myself to the folks now leading the GEC since the administration change. Do you know who I could connect with on this?

Yes, we do think supplemental mentorship could help both those organizations. What has been helpful is both Fatabyyano's desire to help them cross the finish line and the fact that both organizations are highly motivated and really want to be both effective fact-check units and signatories.

I'd love to hop on a call next week to discuss potential next steps, if that's something you all are amenable to?

Hope this email finds you well.

Just wanted to provide you with a quick update on our plans in Thailand.

The embassy is connecting us with CoFact, a new fact-checking initiative in Thailand, inspired by Taiwanese CoFacts.

It's a great match since we know CoFacts of Taiwan very well, including spending time with its founder Lee Bi-Ling, aka Billion, at Poynter for a few weeks during her National Committee on U.S.-China Relations - Professional Fellows Program visit to the United States.

I also had a chance to meet with her team members in Taiwan during a workshop in late 2019 (pre-COVID world!) and really impressed by their efforts.

Our plan with CoFact (Thailand) is to do a public-facing event on the International Fact-Checking Day on April 2nd and provide our 8 hours long self-directed and self-paced training afterward. Our training material will be sent to Thai translators after we have our first meeting with CoFact next week (she is on a leave this week) and confirm the scope of the training based on their team's background and experience.

The goal is to complete the localization and translation of the training material by the end of this month and release the material to them so their team can complete them in 2-3 weeks. Once the self-directed course will be completed by them, we will organize one or two live webinars with them to provide more guidance and tips to apply to IFCN's Code of Principles.

I'll share more in the next few weeks as the program moves forward.

All the best-

Actually, he must have received that update yesterday but I can see that the communication takes longer given the time difference between us and him in Bangkok.

We will share our updates with him and his team with you.

Hi (b)(6)

Thanks for checking in.

As of today, the DS1909 form has been sent to our VP of Finance and Business for her signature and will be sent back to the Embassy in Bangkok for execution.

That will officially extend the project to July 31st of this year.

The course material has been prepared and currently it's currently in the translation process.

The materials will be shared with the embassy for confirmation and they can be delivered as early as the first week of March.

Thank you for your understanding and happy to have a call to discuss if you have any questions.

Subject: Re: CNN query on LatAm digital/ radio ads

Hi Priscilla,

I can supply the following information below. This is all the information I have at this time:

On Background, attributable to a State Department Spokesperson:

- We have long leveraged targeted messages in the region on migration, but we have ramped up the scope of messaging since January 20 when this Administration took office.
- We are using digital, video, and radio messages in Mexico, El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras to provide potential migrants with factual information about the ongoing closure of the border to counteract the lies and disinformation spread by coyotes and traffickers.
- Our messages also focus on generating hope for those considering migrating that they can build a better life in their home countries as in the U.S., as partner governments, NGOs, international organizations and the private sector are working to improve governance, economic prosperity, and security in the region.
- We utilize multiple social media platforms to communicate these messages, taking into account the multiple streams of information used to find factual information about migration. All digital ads are compatible with mobile devices, as data shows mobile is the dominant source of media consumption in the region
- We use the same means to share with audiences in those four countries the U.S. commitment and actions to generate economic opportunities, improve economic well-being, and combat corruption.
- Radio ad scripts are derived from real-life testimonials.
- Since January 2021, we have run an estimated 28K radio ads in Brazil, El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras in Spanish, Portuguese, and six indigenous languages. The current Central America radio campaign includes nationwide coverage in all regions, including both urban hubs and targeted rural areas where migrants are more likely to come from.
- These ads played on 133 radio stations, reaching at least 7 million Central American radio listeners and potentially as many as 22.8 million listeners each month. From October 2019 to December 2020, we ran an estimated 7,500 radio ads per month on 30 radio stations in El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras. Radio impressions data is pulled from listenership estimates, meaning the potential reach numbers indicated are likely significantly lower than the actual number of listeners reached.
- The Department takes a data-informed approach to deploying digital and traditional modes of advertising. We use message testing and audience research to make content more engaging and persuasive to target audiences, including potential irregular migrants. This data-driven approach allows the Department to communicate in complex information environments overseas to reach target audiences with credible, resonant messages, on platforms they use, and at times these audiences are most engaged.

Hello,

I'm an immigration reporter at CNN. I'm reaching out regarding the digital and radio ads released in Latin America to discourage migration to the US southern border.

White House press secretary Jen Psaki said the US, via the State Department, had placed approximately 17,118 radio ads in Brazil, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras since January 21 in Spanish, Portuguese and six indigenous languages. She also said the State Department worked with Facebook and Instagram on an advertising campaign.

Can you share examples of those ads?

I wonder if the GEC can discuss with us the apparent Russian connections here:

We did not include them in our reporting yet _ we're still working on it. But we're seeing apparent Russian hosting of fazze.com (which is now offline) and interesting LinkedIn connections between adnow.com and fazze employees. Is this an SVR front, one wonders?

Seems like there may be considerably more to Russia's effort to try to discredit Pfizer and other Western vaccines than what this WSJ piece referenced <https://www.wsj.com/articles/russian-disinformation-campaign-aims-to-undermine-confidence-in-pfizer-other-covid-19-vaccines-u-s-officials-say-11615129200>

"Shall we expect some transatlantic military giant, to step the Ocean, and crush us at a blow? Never! -- All the armies of Europe, Asia and Africa combined, ...could not by force, take a drink from the Ohio, or make a track on the Blue Ridge, in a trial of a thousand years. At what point then is the approach of danger to be expected? I answer, if it ever reach us, it must spring up amongst us. It cannot come from abroad. If destruction be our lot, we must ourselves be its author and finisher. As a nation of freemen, we must live through all time, or die by suicide."

Joe,

I can make either of those dates and times (1600 on April 5; 0900 on April 9) work, too. Best, Daniel

Joe,

Good morning. WRT rehearsal availability: 1600 on 5 Apr; Both options 6 Apr; Unavail 7-8 Apr; 0900 on 9 Apr.

Bio and headshot coming as requested via SEPCOR. For rehearsal, I will use the same endpoint equipment that I will have for the event. However, since I will be in Newport for the event, I am afraid that we must place trust in Cox to deliver a broadband service on par with the Verizon service I will use for rehearsal. It should be fine, right? Right?

Warm regards,
 Steve

Panel Members

Thank you again for joining us at the Phoenix Challenge conference on April 13th. Your panel will run from 1030-1215 EDT – please mark your calendars accordingly.

You are on Panel 1: Information Effects in Strategic Competition and your panel shepherd to guide you through the rehearsal is Boyd Brown. He will follow up with you on matters in this email.

In order to check comms prior and ensure a smooth panel, we must schedule a rehearsal the week of April 5th at either 0900 or 1600ET. Please reply with your availability ASAP. To the extent possible, please arrange to participate in the rehearsal from the same location and computer that you will use on April 13th. This will allow us to identify and plan for any technical issues.

In order for us to adhere to our event compliance and provide pertinent information to attendees, we ask that all speakers provide the following information. As the event is fast approaching, if each of you could provide these to me (and Angie Mallory copied) as soon as possible, it would be greatly appreciated.

1. Short bio and a head shot. If you would like us to pull these from LinkedIn or another website, just let us know.
2. Emergency contact information (cell phone, office phone & email) for the day of the event to allow instant contact in case of tech issues.
3. We have your names, titles, and institutions listed below – please send us back any corrections.

OFFICIAL

Hi All,

Thank you for your time this morning. It was wonderful to e-meet you all, and great to hear how the Poynter program is progressing.

As discussed we are keen to understand what the costs would be to extend the existing program for an additional 12 months, and to add a business model sustainability component as well.

I will send a calendar invite shortly for another catch up in a few weeks. Please share this invitation with your respective colleagues, including at ABC and RMIT. We will also invite our colleagues who run the PACMAS program to participate.

Many thanks,

Mauri Bauro:

I hope you are doing well and I am happy to see that Kiribati has still remained free of Covid throughout the pandemic.

I am reaching out about the New York Times licensing project that the East-West Center is managing for the U.S. Department of State, in partnership with the Institute for War & Peace Reporting. After Joshua at the New York Times onboarded Uekera and provided you with all the information you needed to access and use the content, I have not heard from you. I've reached out a number of times asking about your experience with the project, if you need any more help to take full advantage of the opportunity, and if you are using content from The Times in your publication. Since I haven't heard back I'm reaching out one last time.

Your current licensing agreement expires on November 30, 2021 and the Department of State is currently considering a short-term extension of licenses (through the end of December 2021) in order to fully evaluate whether they want to continue with the project beyond that time. In order for Uekera to be eligible for the immediately short-term extension can you please respond to this email by close of business Friday August 6th. Please let us know if you are currently using The New York Times content in your publication and indicate your understanding that in order to be considered for a longer-term extension you are required to provide monthly reports to the East-West Center about your usage. If I do not hear back from you by the deadline I will have to assume that you are not interested in continuing with the project or that you did not find the service useful.

Thanks for your consideration of the timely matter.

All the best,

Scott

Subject: GEC FY21 Strategy for Engagement in Europe
Date: Thu, 5 Nov 2020 13:27:31 +0000

Please find appended below an agenda for tomorrow's discussion. We look forward to speaking with you all.

With a new fiscal year and a full slate of programs in execution globally, the GEC China team invites you to join a discussion as we look ahead to our efforts in Europe in FY21.

We hope this discussion can be candid, informal, and focused on how we can bring our unique capabilities to bear to support our efforts to counter PRC malign influence in Europe. We look forward to hearing your thoughts on where we've made progress, where gaps remains, and things we should keep in mind as put together our programmatic strategy for FY21.

With a new fiscal year and a full slate of programs in execution globally, the GEC China team invites you to join a discussion as we look ahead to our efforts in Europe in FY21.

We hope this discussion can be candid, informal, and focused on how we can bring our unique capabilities to bear to support our efforts to counter PRC malign influence in Europe. We look forward to hearing your thoughts on where we've made progress, where gaps remains, and things we should keep in mind as put together our programmatic strategy for FY21.

Subject: [fakenewssci] Call for Abstracts - Global Fact 9 Academic Track
Date: Mon, 14 Feb 2022 17:40:03 -0500

Call for Abstracts - Global Fact 9 Academic Track

Short abstracts now due 25 February 2022

As noted in an earlier communication, the first day of the Global Fact summit, 22 June, will be devoted to an academic track, with several invited panelists and speakers addressing topics such as:

- Best academic practices in—and potential contributions to—this developing field.
- Fact-checking in the context of misinformation and increasing polarization.
- Directions of fact-checking, e.g., towards more debunking and tech partnerships.
- (Socio)technical tools—old, new, and yet-to-be-developed—in fact-checking.
- Fact-checker safety—mental, emotional, and/or physical.
- Collaborations between different types of actors, based on topics, aims, regions, languages, etc.
- Regulation efforts aimed at big tech and platforms, and the impact on fact-checking partnerships and funding.
- Media and information literacy in the age of COVID-19 and declining institutional trust.
- The importance of publicly available data (e.g., national statistics, platform insights) and other resources for fact-checkers.
- Fact-checking in the context of oppression—e.g., how it can be conducted and disseminated.

In addition to the invited presentations, we are reserving a portion of the academic track for lightning-round presentations. These will entail discussions of your work, at whatever stage—conceptual, in progress, or finished—in a shorter time frame. Depending on the number of submissions accepted, presentations will likely be limited to 10 minutes with questions. We are particularly interested in work from early career researchers, work that focuses on marginalized communities or regions, and/or work using new or innovative methods. Potential topics might include, but are no way restricted to, the above list.

If you are interested in presenting at this open session, please fill out this form. Please include your institutional affiliation and contact information, a title, a description of what you'd like to present (~300 words), and a paragraph on the significance (~150 words). The deadline for submissions is now 25 February 2022 (extended from 18 February), and notifications of selection will be on or before 25 March 2022.

If you have questions, please feel free to email \(b\)\(6\)@oslomet.no(6)@oslomet.no). You can also contact the OsloMet-based team behind the Source Criticism and Mediated Disinformation project.

#FakeNewsSci seeks to cultivate and continue an academic and practical agenda around defining and protecting against fake news and misinformation, and work to build news literacy, defend a free press and strengthen first amendment principles.

There are three ground rules for this community aimed at ensuring appropriate communication and exchange:

- (1) Civility is the primary responsibility of membership - we intend to avoid uncivil debates or rhetoric and those who violate this rule will be immediately removed.
- (2) To preserve people's comfort with being open and frank, all exchanges are to be treated as "off the record" unless the member(s) in question explicitly agree otherwise.
- (3) To maintain high-quality exchanges of ideas and practice, all new members must be recommended by two other group members to be added to this group. Please fill the form at <https://goo.gl/forms/h1UkZHwGEjt5Z4wg1> before you apply for membership.

Subject: [disinfogroup] Consultation: Framework for information incidents
Date: Tue, 23 Mar 2021 17:10:57 +0000

Dear colleagues,

With apologies for any cross posting, I am happy to share that Full Fact, the UK's independent fact checking charity, has launched a new consultation on a model for tackling information incidents.

Over the past seven months, Full Fact has been working with a variety of organisations including Facebook, Google, Twitter, First Draft and the UK and Canadian governments to create a Framework for Information Incidents.

The Framework is intended to enable better collaboration among organisations tackling information incidents. We all know that certain events (e.g. the pandemic, elections, natural disasters) can affect the information environment so that it becomes harder for those of us tackling misinformation to do so effectively. It is our belief that collaboration and a greater consideration of proportionality and global consistency is needed in order to effectively respond to these events. That is why we have created this new model.

We are now looking for feedback on the proposed five level system for determining the severity of an incident, the common challenges that occur across different incidents, and how to respond in proportionate and effective ways. We are keen to get responses from a wide range of organisations who tackle or are affected by misinformation during crisis events. We will use this feedback to further develop and refine the framework, with the goal of publishing a second version later in the year.

The consultation will be open until 14 May. You can respond either by email to policy@fullfact.org, or online via fullfact.org/incidentframework. I've attached the pdf, but you can also access the text online.

Best wishes,
Nicola

Hi Baybars,

Yes, the DS1909 needs to be signed by the proper person at Poynter who has authority to sign for grants. Once they sign, please send back to me.

We are excited about reviewing the online course materials. We originally scheduled January for the first review. Are you still okay with the current period of performance (ending July 31) to accomplish all activities/outputs?

Regards,

(b)(6)

Hi (b)(6)

Thanks! I confirm the receipt of the DS1909.

Do you want this to be signed by us? I can send it to you after asking our VP of Finance and Business signs it.

On the other hand, we are ready to deliver the training.

How should we proceed to schedule them?

Looking forward to hearing from you.

Given we are heading to the end of the year and the winter break here, can we aim the following timeline for the amendment?

Late January: Poynter provides online course outline to Embassy for review (in English). Embassy and TJA provide feedback.

Mid February: Poynter provides online course version 2 to Embassy (in English or Thai). Embassy and TJA provide feedback.

Early March: Poynter provides final version of online course to Embassy (in Thai). Embassy and TJA make final checks.

Late March: Virtual Training + Kickoff Press Conference at TJA to introduce the new online course.

Hi Baybars,

I hope you are well. I'm sure that election season is an exciting time for the fact checking community!

Given the many challenges of Covid we appreciate your willingness to be flexible in this project. My team and I have reviewed the Google Doc and we generally like the plan. We are wondering if you can make two changes. One, to be less ambitious, we recommend 1 (one) not three virtual training sessions. Also, is there any way to increase the payment to TJA for their services? Their work as implementing partner will be very important.

To review, the two major components of the grant are 1) virtual training and 2) development of an online course. Here is a rough sketch of timings we think are realistic:

Mid November: Poynter provides online course outline to Embassy for review (in English). Embassy and TJA provide feedback.

Mid December: Poynter provides online course version 2 to Embassy (in English or Thai). Embassy and TJA provide feedback.

Early January: Poynter provides final version of online course to Embassy (in Thai). Embassy and TJA make final checks.

Late January: Virtual Training + Kickoff Press Conference at TJA to introduce the new online course.

Sound okay?

Kind Regards,

Hi Baybars,

We have a few ideas for how to move the grant forward. Let us know what you think, and please provide an estimate of the cost.

1. Three Online Training Sessions for the Thai Journalists Association (TJA is the main professional association for journalists in Thailand. We would recommend you pay TJA as the implementing partner so they can procure simultaneous translation, and naturally you would provide them with admin fees etc so they can help you organize the sessions.
 - a. Session 1 - September 3. Fact-Checking and Misinformation (broad overview for journalists and editors)
 - b. Session 2 – Mid-September. Fact-Checking for News Rooms (for news room editors)
 - c. Session 3 – October. Fact-Checking: U.S. Election Watch (20-30 media and academics.

2. Online Course for Thai Journalists. This would be an online course with quizzes and a final test in the Thai language. The goal is to promote journalism standards, fact-checking, and accuracy. Thai journalists who complete the course with a passing score would receive a certificate which could read “This is to certify that –NAME – has received IFCN Certification in News-Room Fact-Checking” or something similar. This would be a morale booster for the journalists, and something they can put on a resume.
 - a. Phase 1. September – IFCN submits course outline and structure to the Embassy which will seek comment from TJA and may adjust the outline to meet the needs of the Thai environment.
 - b. Phase 2. December – IFCN submits full course in Thai language to Embassy for review.
 - c. Phase 3. January – IFCN Launches course with joint press releases, social media postings, and an online event with TJA and IFCN.

Would that be possible to send it in a week or two and we then start acting assuming we confirm the new scope of the program.

My suggestion for the rest of the project based on your feedbacks are;

- To organize a Skype call Yo/Sure and Share, and SONP as per Tom's suggestion and discuss their progress and provide feedback before their application.
- Schedule a call this or next week to;
 - Set the date and the content for the video conference from Florida
 - Fix the scope and the date for Thai's delegation visit to St. Petersburg, FL
 - Decide who to bring to Global Fact in Oslo from Thailand (possibility from other Mekong countries as well)

Once we kick the ball rolling, this will be a lot easier to move.

Meanwhile, let me talk to (b)(6) I think we would like to reformat the grant a bit and include some new elements. Would you be willing to (in addition to some international travel for Thais), do the following:

1. DVC with Yo/Sure and Share, and SONP to discuss their efforts toward certification. We can do that in February on the planned dates, or we can look to a convenient time in the next month.

I've just seen the news on Reuters that Thailand confirms the first human-to-human coronavirus transmission. The virus has been a big focus for the fact-checkers lately as we keep publishing our reports on the misinformation around the disease.

I've also heard that Splice Beta is canceled/postponed due to WHO's declaration on public health emergency of international concern.

All those considered, can we officially amend the project with no travel to Bangkok in February and discuss alternative options such as bringing people either to the US or Oslo? We can multiply the impact of the engagement with such options

Hi (b)(6)

Thank you so much! I really appreciate it! Fingers crossed! Once again, thank you so much for your understanding.

Eoghan Sweeney, German trainer who is one of the leading experts on Open Source Intelligence Tools for fact-checking & verification. More about him and his works are available here > <https://www.osintessentials.com/> He can do great work by providing the training in those two days.

Having said that and putting more thought into it, my suggestion will be to try to invite senior and non-senior Thai to Florida and use the remaining resources to bring Thai and some other regional participants to Oslo for the Global Fact between 24-27 June. By doing these two - not doing the Bangkok training in February - we can achieve;

- having one-to-one time with leading figures of the Thai media and journalists in the steer of their newsrooms
- offering Poynter's renowned teaching resources to the participants and merging ethics & newsroom management seminars with our fact-checking training
- following up with some of the participants in Florida tour in Oslo during the Global Fact and having them (Shure and Share + others) exposed to 60+ different sessions in 3.5 days

Once the Global Fact 7 is over, Shure and Share along with other potential Thai partners can apply to the network thanks to the training they had (Bangkok/October + Florida/Spring + Oslo/June) in three different settings and the remote consulting I had been providing and will keep providing until they are evaluated by our advisory board.

If those don't sound a terrible idea to you, I can send a draft template over the weekend for what we can cover in 2-3 days in Florida for the first group. Also, the attached program of the last Global Fact which took place in Cape Town, South Africa can also give a better sense of what will most likely await the Thai & regional journalists in Oslo.

One way or another, I'll make sure we will share our know-how with the invested participants and support the practitioners in the country. I remain committed to making this effort helping the non-partisan Thai media landscape.

There are some developments on my end that I need to talk to you about as soon as possible regarding our plans.

May I kindly ask for a call at your earliest convenience this week?

Thanks a lot

Good Afternoon all,

Hope this email finds you all well and looking forward to brand new week ☺ .

Just wanted to touch base with you John and Dave since we sent out emails a few weeks ago to our participating newsrooms across the region to check in on their passwords and access.

John, has there been any direct feedback with you and is there anything else we can assist with?

Also, in terms of a "Call for All", do you have any tentative dates that we could work with to schedule, do let us know what could work.

Thank you for your time and look forward to hearing from you soon.

Cheers,

Maggie Boyle

Hi (b)(6)

Please have the user's that require account verification and resets reach out directly to John Khin above.
*John please re-run current users list to and provide for (b)(6).

Resending the link for online training materials on AP Academy:

Also, we would like to let you know that we now have a product training and client engagement team and would be happy to schedule a Zoom presentation for the group. Realize difficult with time change involved but we have some people that could be game to do this at an odd hour.

Thanks,

Dave

Hi Dave and John-

Per the report you sent to Maggie I can see that several of the users need to verify accounts or change their passwords. Can you send us the Youtube videos you mentioned as well as the best email for the users who need assistant resetting or verifying their accounts. We'd like to reach out to all of them again to encourage them to use the service and we can ask if they'd like a training via WebEx.

In the meantime is there any way to see how much the active users are accessing and/or downloading from AP?

Have a wonderful day.

Hi Maggie-

Well we made it to November 4th but still no declared winner, historic and exhausting at once. Here is the information you requested. It seems to me that it would be a good idea to organize a training session or training materials for you users. Realize there is a time difference issue but we can be flexible for a webex session, there is also a plethora of information online including instructional YouTube videos – please let me know how that sounds.

Thank you.

I understand you were integral in the free provision of AP content for the Pacific Islands and I would appreciate your assistance in my current task to highlight some data on the program's uptake.

I'm hoping to comply some data on how many news organizations in the Pacific are using the free AP Asia Online and AP Top News Service since the inception of the grant/program.

Is there a way in which your organization is able to assist with this information gathering, also how often they are using the content?

Appreciate your time and I look forward to hearing from you.

Dear Erica,

Thank you so much! Happy new year to you too!

We, unfortunately, haven't been able to identify the local beneficiary for Tunisia, The conversation with HAICA stalled, showing a lack of motivation from HAICA's side. We were already a bit hesitant to identify them as our local beneficiaries in this project, therefore currently looking for other outlets which might be a better fit.

We would be more than happy to hear your thoughts and suggestions while we keep looking for a newsroom/media outlet in the country.

All the best-

I am transitioning out of post, so I will leave my colleagues Erica and Mary to respond to this officially. I think the HAICA proposal looks promising and that it is worth serious consideration. (My only issue with the proposal is that they have the Covid timeline in Tunisia wrong.) It appears to dovetail with another project supported by the Embassy / GEC on Counter disinformation and propaganda on the Covid-19 pandemic in Tunisia. Our grantee is the Grande Ecole de la Communication (GEC) which is working with the Tunisian Ministry of Health.

Just wanted to kindly remind my inquiry about your thoughts on HAICA from Tunisia as a potential local partner for our training engagement in the country.

I'm sharing two documents that I've received about the organization (via UNDP) and kindly asking your feedback on their status and eligibility to be a good partner for this project.

Looking forward to hearing from you.

I'm aware that HAICA is a constitutional body set up after the revolution and is not a private organization, however, wondering if they are more independent than similar organizations around the world.

Thanks a lot for this introduction, (b)(6)! Happy to be connected.

Gaby, we are lacking a trainee organization in Tunisia to kick off the trainings. Dogruluk Payi from Turkey will be our regional partner in those trainings, therefore will be providing guidance and support throughout the implementation of the engagement.

We like to hear your thoughts and guidance on identifying a Tunisian newsroom and/or non-profit organization to engage with and train them to be eligible for the International Fact-Checking Network's Code of Principles.

I'll be more than happy to connect with the colleagues at the embassy to seek help in our search for a partner in the country.

Baybars,

I hope you are doing well! I'm touching base with you regarding the Tunisia portion of your IFCN program. I understand from your recent amendment that Poynter still seeks a local Tunisian organization with whom to partner.

May you provide our public affairs officer at the U.S. Embassy in Tunis with an update on where things stand regarding Tunisia by open of business tomorrow (Thursday)? Her name is Gabby Price and her email is (b)(6)@state.gov. She is already aware that you and IWPR will reach out with an update and to begin coordinating on potential local implementers. The embassy likely can assist you in your search.

Please cc myself, Vonda, Alan, and (b)(6)@state.gov from our Near Eastern Affairs Bureau on your email. I ask with urgency because Gabby is leaving her position within the next several days. She would like to brief her successor on all pending projects to avoid any disconnect or confusion that the transition may cause. It would also be useful for you to mention that you've identified Doğruluk Payı -- the Turkish fact-checking organization -- as the one who will be connected with the Tunisian organization TBD.

Thank you again, and I do hope you and your family are remaining healthy these days.

Hello,

I'm a national security reporter with The Washington Post and have covered information operations, cyber and intelligence issues.

We're working on a story with a quick turnaround (needs to be edited by tomorrow afternoon) that assesses the strengths and potential pitfalls of Ukraine's remarkable information campaign during its war with Russia.

I understand that Daniel Kimmage is researching a related topic at NDU –on Russian and Soviet disinformation, and he's a noted expert on the subject.

Could you arrange for me to speak with him –even on background—so that our readers may have the benefits of his insights –even if not attributed to him by name?

We would be ever so grateful.

Thank you,
Ellen Nakashima

Given we are heading to the end of the year and the winter break here, can we aim the following timeline for the amendment?

Late January: Poynter provides online course outline to Embassy for review (in English).

Embassy and TJA provide feedback.

Mid February: Poynter provides online course version 2 to Embassy (in English or Thai).

Embassy and TJA provide feedback.

Early March: Poynter provides final version of online course to Embassy (in Thai). Embassy and TJA make final checks.

Late March: Virtual Training + Kickoff Press Conference at TJA to introduce the new online course.

Hi Baybars,

I hope you are well. I'm sure that election season is an exciting time for the fact checking community!

Given the many challenges of Covid we appreciate your willingness to be flexible in this project. My team and I have reviewed the Google Doc and we generally like the plan. We are wondering if you can make two changes. One, to be less ambitious, we recommend 1 (one) not three virtual training sessions. Also, is there any way to increase the payment to TJA for their services? Their work as implementing partner will be very important.

To review, the two major components of the grant are 1) virtual training and 2) development of an online course. Here is a rough sketch of timings we think are realistic:

Mid November: Poynter provides online course outline to Embassy for review (in English). Embassy and TJA provide feedback.

Mid December: Poynter provides online course version 2 to Embassy (in English or Thai). Embassy and TJA provide feedback.

Early January: Poynter provides final version of online course to Embassy (in Thai). Embassy and TJA make final checks.

Late January: Virtual Training + Kickoff Press Conference at TJA to introduce the new online course.

Sound okay?

Hi Baybars,

We have a few ideas for how to move the grant forward. Let us know what you think, and please provide an estimate of the cost.

1. Three Online Training Sessions for the Thai Journalists Association (TJA is the main professional association for journalists in Thailand. We would recommend you pay TJA as the implementing partner so they can procure simultaneous translation, and naturally you would provide them with admin fees etc so they can help you organize the sessions.
 - a. Session 1 - September 3. Fact-Checking and Misinformation (broad overview for journalists and editors)
 - b. Session 2 – Mid-September. Fact-Checking for News Rooms (for news room editors)
 - c. Session 3 – October. Fact-Checking: U.S. Election Watch (20-30 media and academics.
2. Online Course for Thai Journalists. This would be an online course with quizzes and a final test in the Thai language. The goal is to promote journalism standards, fact-checking, and accuracy. Thai journalists who complete the course with a passing score would receive a certificate which could read “This is to certify that –NAME – has received IFCN Certification in News-Room Fact-Checking” or something similar. This would be a morale booster for the journalists, and something they can put on a resume.
 - a. Phase 1. September – IFCN submits course outline and structure to the Embassy which will seek comment from TJA and may adjust the outline to meet the needs of the Thai environment.
 - b. Phase 2. December – IFCN submits full course in Thai language to Embassy for review.
 - c. Phase 3. January – IFCN Launches course with joint press releases, social media postings, and an online event with TJA and IFCN.

Hi Baybars,

Greetings from Thailand, where we have had very low cases of the virus. I hope you are well! Has the U.S. citizen paperwork been going okay? (b)(6) has moved to Hawaii for a year at the East West Center.

I'm writing to see if we can move the grant forward and somehow safely train/certify Thailand's first IFCN fact-check organization.

Any and all ideas are on the table – including virtual training.

All best,

Hi (b)(6)

Hope all is well on your end too and you are all doing well and healthy!

It's been a crazy week not only workwise but also personally as well for all of us so please accept my apologies for the late response.

I just wanted to share that I'll share the proposal with you before the end of the week. I couldn't do that yet because there has been an enormous workload on our e-learning department as everything is being migrated to online, therefore I had wait a bit to have my turn with them.

Once I have the costs and timeline from them, I'll share it with you and will look forward to moving forward!

Stay healthy and safe!

Hi (b)(6)

It was great to talk to you as well!

I agree with you. I think it will be wiser to design the extension/modification relying only on virtual teaching and a limited notion of bringing two Thai participants to Oslo.

I'll have a meeting with related faculty people at Poynter and then share the possibilities and ideas around localizing our training materials to Thai and creating new modules from scratch.

I should be able to send that email to you by Monday if that's not too late.

Hi Baybars,

Was great talking to you the other day. I'm looking forward to seeing your revised proposal on how we can best utilize the remaining funds in the current environment. Thailand's Ministry of Public Health is now raising its alert level for other nations new experiencing a rise in cases, including European countries. It will also be important to note the rise in cases in the U.S. and to see if that could impact Thai travel to the U.S. Department of State

Given the rapidly evolving situation and potential risks, I'd ask you to think about virtual programming and have an annex to your proposal that has a fully virtual (no travel) scenario. This could include mass translation of web based courses into Thai, Web based virtual training, etc etc.

All best,

Dear (b)(6)

Hope this email finds you well.

It's great to hear from you, (b)(6) I really missed that beautiful place! Hope you had a great break!

My suggestion for the rest of the project based on your feedbacks are;

- To organize a Skype call Yo/Sure and Share, and SONP as per (b)(6) suggestion and discuss their progress and provide feedback before their application.
- Schedule a call this or next week to;
 - Set the date and the content for the video conference from Florida
 - Fix the scope and the date for Thai's delegation visit to St. Petersburg, FL
 - Decide who to bring to Global Fact in Oslo from Thailand (possibility from other Mekong countries as well)

Once we kick the ball rolling, this will be a lot easier to move.

Looking forward to hearing from you for your ideal day to have a 9am Bangkok time call.

How shall we proceed? I think it's time we get something down in writing – dates for a video conference from Florida, dates for a visit by a few to Florida, and then a total number of Thais to Oslo. Let's look at the budget and the planning, get something approved, and determine when you might be able to get back out here as well!

I depart Thailand mid June, so would love to be sure we have everything rolling before I go!

Thank you Baybars. I can understand that many don't want to travel to the region considering the international declarations.

We are facing a battle here of information and misinformation. We'll very much like to see what you are doing in that space.

Meanwhile, let me talk to (b)(6) I think we would like to reformat the grant a bit and include some new elements. Would you be willing to (in addition to some international travel for Thais), do the following:

1. DVC with Yo/Sure and Share, and SONP to discuss their efforts toward certification. We can do that in February on the planned dates, or we can look to a convenient time in the next month.
2. Come back to Thailand after you can travel again, and after Oslo?

Once we know the answer to those, (b)(6) can work with you to amend the grant.

Thanks!

Hi (b)(6)

Greetings from DC! I just organized a day-long event at the Washington Post in partnership with Google and been working on the side for the programming in Bangkok.

I've just seen the news on Reuters that Thailand confirms the first human-to-human coronavirus transmission. The virus has been a big focus for the fact-checkers lately as we keep publishing our reports on the misinformation around the disease.

I've also heard that Splice Beta is canceled/postponed due to WHO's declaration on public health emergency of international concern.

All those considered, can we officially amend the project with no travel to Bangkok in February and discuss alternative options such as bringing people either to the US or Oslo? We can multiply the impact of the engagement with such options

Looking forward to hearing your thoughts.

Thanks

Hi (b)(6)

Thank you so much! I really appreciate it! Fingers crossed! Once again, thank you so much for your understanding.

Eoghan Sweeney, German trainer who is one of the leading experts on Open Source Intelligence Tools for fact-checking & verification. More about him and his works are available here

> <https://www.osintessentials.com/> He can do great work by providing the training in those two days.

Having said that and putting more thought into it, my suggestion will be to try to invite senior and non-senior Thai to Florida and use the remaining resources to bring Thai and some other regional participants to Oslo for the Global Fact between 24-27 June. By doing these two - not doing the Bangkok training in February - we can achieve;

- having one-to-one time with leading figures of the Thai media and journalists in the steer of their newsrooms
- offering Poynter's renowned teaching resources to the participants and merging ethics & newsroom management seminars with our fact-checking training

- following up with some of the participants in Florida tour in Oslo during the Global Fact and having them (Shure and Share + others) exposed to 60+ different sessions in 3.5 days

Once the Global Fact 7 is over, Shure and Share along with other potential Thai partners can apply to the network thanks to the training they had (Bangkok/October + Florida/Spring + Oslo/June) in three different settings and the remote consulting I had been providing and will keep providing until they are evaluated by our advisory board.

If those don't sound a terrible idea to you, I can send a draft template over the weekend for what we can cover in 2-3 days in Florida for the first group. Also, the attached program of the last Global Fact which took place in Cape Town, South Africa can also give a better sense of what will most likely await the Thai & regional journalists in Oslo.

One way or another, I'll make sure we will share our know-how with the invested participants and support the practitioners in the country. I remain committed to making this effort helping the non-partisan Thai media landscape.

Though you may have more ideas, the activities we wrote down from the call were:

- Sending Thais (could be a mix of senior and working level) to Poynter in Florida
- Christina and trainer come to Thailand in place of Baybars and trainer
- Sending Thais (and perhaps other journalists from Mekong/Indo-Pacific countries) to Oslo, June 24-27

Panel Members,

My apologies for the delay in getting the invite out. Shortly after this email, you should receive an invite from (b)(6) for rehearsal meeting on Teams for Friday, April 9 at 9am EDT.

I would also like to announce a change to the line up and am pleased to announce that DASD for Special Operations and Counterterrorism, Milancy Harris, will be joining us on the panel.

RADM (Ret) Steve Parade will be shifting to panel 2 (though he may join us on Friday as he has a conflict for his panel rehearsal time).

Due to the need to ensure the ability for our DoD speakers and attendees to connect to the event in a controlled and confidential manner, we have moved the event on to DoD's Microsoft platform - cvt.mil. We have also shifted from doing the event as a Live Event to holding the sessions as Teams meetings. The major impact of this change is that the sessions will all be capped at 250 people (including speakers and staff) and it will give us greater control over the attendees experience.

The goal for our rehearsal is to test your connection and technology, provide all of you some insights and best practices for a Team based panel, and finally discuss everyone's planned remarks.

Please let Angie or myself know if you have any questions or concerns.

Thank you again for your support and we look forward to seeing you all on Friday!

V/R,

Joe Kelly

Dear Panel 1 Members,

Note that if you are dialing in from a government computer, you will need to create a cvr.mil account to access the Teams rehearsal and main event. Apologies for another step—we're working hard to make this event as secure and easy as possible, and believe it or not, this is the easiest method, given the constraints.

Please try to dial into the rehearsal from the same computer you'll be using for the event, to avoid as many unforeseen challenges as possible.

Thank you again for joining us at the Phoenix Challenge conference on April 13th. Your panel will run from 1030-1215 EDT – please mark your calendars accordingly.

You are on Panel 1: Information Effects in Strategic Competition and your panel shepherd to guide you through the rehearsal is Boyd Brown. He will follow up with you on matters in this email.

In order to check comms prior and ensure a smooth panel, we must schedule a rehearsal the week of April 5th at either 0900 or 1600ET. Please reply with your availability A5AP. To the extent possible, please arrange to participate in the rehearsal from the same location and

In order for us to adhere to our event compliance and provide pertinent information to attendees, we ask that all speakers provide the following information. As the event is fast approaching, if each of you could provide these to me (and Angie Mallory copied) as soon as possible, it would be greatly appreciated.

1. Short bio and a head shot. If you would like us to pull these from LinkedIn or another website, just let us know.
2. Emergency contact information (cell phone, office phone & email) for the day of the event to allow instant contact in case of tech issues.
3. We have your names, titles, and institutions listed below – please send us back any corrections.

 - f. Ms. Ellen Nakashima, National Security Reporter, The Washington Post

Please find attached the updated agenda and note that it includes a change in format. We will not be holding breakout sessions with attendees as it will interfere with effective presentations by you our panelists. That means we will need you to participate for the full scheduled panel time.

We will be recording the event but conducting it under Chatham House rules of non-attribution and the recording will only be made available to registered attendees. Please keep an eye out for a speaker release form that will be coming separately.

Hi (b)(6)

Sorry for the late reply.

I (b)(6) missed responding this.

Let's do that!

Given we are heading to the end of the year and the winter break here, can we aim the following timeline for the amendment?

Late January: Poynter provides online course outline to Embassy for review (in English). Embassy and TJA provide feedback.

Mid February: Poynter provides online course version 2 to Embassy (in English or Thai). Embassy and TJA provide feedback.

Early March: Poynter provides final version of online course to Embassy (in Thai). Embassy and TJA make final checks.

Late March: Virtual Training + Kickoff Press Conference at TJA to introduce the new online course.

Hi Baybars,

I hope you are well. I'm sure that election season is an exciting time for the fact checking community!

Given the many challenges of Covid we appreciate your willingness to be flexible in this project. My team and I have reviewed the Google Doc and we generally like the plan. We are wondering if you can make two changes. One, to be less ambitious, we recommend 1 (one) not three virtual training sessions. Also, is there any way to increase the payment to TJA for their services? Their work as implementing partner will be very important.

To review, the two major components of the grant are 1) virtual training and 2) development of an online course. Here is a rough sketch of timings we think are realistic:

Mid November: Poynter provides online course outline to Embassy for review (in English). Embassy and TJA provide feedback.

Mid December: Poynter provides online course version 2 to Embassy (in English or Thai). Embassy and TJA provide feedback.

Early January: Poynter provides final version of online course to Embassy (in Thai). Embassy and TJA make final checks.

Late January: Virtual Training + Kickoff Press Conference at TJA to introduce the new online course.

Sound okay?

Kind Regards,

(b)(6)

Hi Baybars,

We have a few ideas for how to move the grant forward. Let us know what you think, and please provide an estimate of the cost.

1. Three Online Training Sessions for the Thai Journalists Association (TJA is the main professional association for journalists in Thailand. We would recommend you pay TJA as the implementing partner so they can procure simultaneous translation, and naturally you would provide them with admin fees etc so they can help you organize the sessions.
 - a. Session 1 - September 3. Fact-Checking and Misinformation (broad overview for journalists and editors)
 - b. Session 2 – Mid-September. Fact-Checking for News Rooms (for news room editors)
 - c. Session 3 – October. Fact-Checking: U.S. Election Watch (20-30 media and academics.
2. Online Course for Thai Journalists. This would be an online course with quizzes and a final test in the Thai language. The goal is to promote journalism standards, fact-checking, and accuracy. Thai journalists who complete the course with a passing score would receive a certificate which could read "This is to certify that –NAME – has received IFCN Certification in News-Room Fact-Checking" or something similar. This would be a morale booster for the journalists, and something they can put on a resume.

- a. Phase 1. September – IFCN submits course outline and structure to the Embassy which will seek comment from TJA and may adjust the outline to meet the needs of the Thai environment.
- b. Phase 2. December – IFCN submits full course in Thai language to Embassy for review.
- c. Phase 3. January – IFCN Launches course with joint press releases, social media postings, and an online event with TJA and IFCN.

I've heard that (b)(6) is now in another heaven like place in Earth after lovely Thailand and hoping she invites me to Hawai at some point to do a training there! :)

Since the Global Fact is over and I've been able to recover a bit, I'm now able to send you a proposal on our engagement in Thailand.

Would that be possible to send it in a week or two and we then start acting assuming we confirm the new scope of the program.

Looking forward to hearing from you.

I agree with you. I think it will be wiser to design the extension/modification relying only on virtual teaching and a limited notion of bringing two Thai participants to Oslo.

I'll have a meeting with related faculty people at Poynter and then share the possibilities and ideas around localizing our training materials to Thai and creating new modules from scratch.

It will also be important to note the rise in cases in the U.S. and to see if that could impact Thai travel to the U.S. Department of State

Given the rapidly evolving situation and potential risks, I'd ask you to think about virtual programming and have an annex to your proposal that has a fully virtual (no travel) scenario. This could include mass translation of web based courses into Thai, Web based virtual training, etc etc.

My suggestion for the rest of the project based on your feedbacks are;

- To organize a Skype call Yo/Sure and Share, and SONP as per (b)(6) suggestion and discuss their progress and provide feedback before their application.
- Schedule a call this or next week to;
 - Set the date and the content for the video conference from Florida
 - Fix the scope and the date for Thai's delegation visit to St. Petersburg, FL
 - Decide who to bring to Global Fact in Oslo from Thailand (possibility from other Mekong countries as well)

Once we kick the ball rolling, this will be a lot easier to move.

Looking forward to hearing from you for your ideal day to have a 9am Bangkok time call.

Thank you Baybars. I can understand that many don't want to travel to the region considering the international declarations.

We are facing a battle here of information and misinformation. We'll very much like to see what you are doing in that space.

Meanwhile, let me talk to (b)(6) I think we would like to reformat the grant a bit and include some new elements. Would you be willing to (in addition to some international travel for Thais), do the following:

1. DVC with Yo/Sure and Share, and SONP to discuss their efforts toward certification. We can do that in February on the planned dates, or we can look to a convenient time in the next month.
2. Come back to Thailand after you can travel again, and after Oslo?

Once we know the answer to those, (b)(6) can work with you to amend the grant.

Thanks!

Hi (b)(6)

Greetings from DC! I just organized a day-long event at the Washington Post in partnership with Google and been working on the side for the programming in Bangkok.

I've just seen the news on Reuters that Thailand confirms the first human-to-human coronavirus transmission. The virus has been a big focus for the fact-checkers lately as we keep publishing our reports on the misinformation around the disease.

I've also heard that Splice Beta is canceled/postponed due to WHO's declaration on public health emergency of international concern.

All those considered, can we officially amend the project with no travel to Bangkok in February and discuss alternative options such as bringing people either to the US or Oslo? We can multiply the impact of the engagement with such options

Looking forward to hearing your thoughts.

Thanks

Hi (b)(6)

Thank you so much! I really appreciate it! Fingers crossed! Once again, thank you so much for your understanding.

Eoghan Sweeney, German trainer who is one of the leading experts on Open Source Intelligence Tools for fact-checking & verification. More about him and his works are available here > <https://www.osintessentials.com/> He can do great work by providing the training in those two days.

Having said that and putting more thought into it, my suggestion will be to try to invite senior and non-senior Thai to Florida and use the remaining resources to bring Thai and some other regional participants to Oslo for the Global Fact between 24-27 June. By doing these two - not doing the Bangkok training in February - we can achieve;

- having one-to-one time with leading figures of the Thai media and journalists in the steer of their newsrooms
- offering Poynter's renowned teaching resources to the participants and merging ethics & newsroom management seminars with our fact-checking training
- following up with some of the participants in Florida tour in Oslo during the Global Fact and having them (Shure and Share + others) exposed to 60+ different sessions in 3.5 days

Once the Global Fact 7 is over, Shure and Share along with other potential Thai partners can apply to the network thanks to the training they had (Bangkok/October + Florida/Spring + Oslo/June) in three different settings and the remote consulting I had been providing and will keep providing until they are evaluated by our advisory board.

If those don't sound a terrible idea to you, I can send a draft template over the weekend for what we can cover in 2-3 days in Florida for the first group. Also, the attached program of the last Global Fact which took place in Cape Town, South Africa can also give a better sense of what will most likely await the Thai & regional journalists in Oslo.

One way or another, I'll make sure we will share our know-how with the invested participants and support the practitioners in the country. I remain committed to making this effort helping the non-partisan Thai media landscape.

Hi, (b)(6)!

I hope you are doing well. I wanted to give you an update on our story. We are now hoping to run something around Russian propaganda in regards to the Ukraine war in August, and I was hoping to include some of (b)(6) comments around the possibilities he raised that Russia is likely to exploit divisiveness over refugees in Europe. I plan on summarizing his comments that Russian propaganda is likely to play up narratives that refugees cause crime, take away jobs, etc. As for an actual quote, am hoping to use this:

"They'll try to connect them to negative indicators about quality of life in Europe," he said.

As far as a title, how should I handle this as I believe John has already moved into a new position since we spoke?

Also, please let me know if we should touch base before this story runs if there are any relevant updates to be had on this topic.

Hi, (b)(6)

I wanted to thank you again very much for scheduling the interview yesterday with (b)(6). I would love if we could schedule a check-in once the new director comes in as well.

I wanted to touch base on the pamphlet (b)(6) mentioned was circling around during the World Health Assembly that highlighted humanitarian assistance from Russia. Would you be able to send that over, by chance?

Also, I know that (b)(6) mentioned some of the propaganda around food shortages, and I wondered if the GEC might be willing to share an example of what they have seen?

I will send a few quotes for approval later this week.

Thank you very much,

Hi, (b)(6) -

Thank you again, yes, I can share some of the broader points I'd like to touch base on:

- _ Countries and narratives that the GEC is seeing Russian propaganda thrive?
- _ Which countries are a priority for the GEC to counter that narrative?
- _ What are the most effective ways the GEC has countered that narrative?
- _ Has GEC engaged at all with US-owned tech companies to talk about some of the mis-and dis-information around the war?
- _ Which countries' leaders has the GEC engaged in conversations with around the prevalence of Russian propaganda?
- _ Which Russian propaganda narratives are the most effective?
- _ Can you speak to how different the perception of outlets like RT and Sputnik is in some of these other countries?

I hope this is helpful for you to have a general sense, and I look forward to chatting tomorrow.

Subject: Re: CNN query on LatAm digital/ radio ads

Hi Priscilla,

I can supply the following information below. This is all the information I have at this time:

On Background, attributable to a State Department Spokesperson:

- We have long leveraged targeted messages in the region on migration, but we have ramped up the scope of messaging since January 20 when this Administration took office.
- We are using digital, video, and radio messages in Mexico, El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras to provide potential migrants with factual information about the ongoing closure of the border to counteract the lies and disinformation spread by coyotes and traffickers.
- Our messages also focus on generating hope for those considering migrating that they can build a better life in their home countries as in the U.S., as partner governments, NGOs, international organizations and the private sector are working to improve governance, economic prosperity, and security in the region.
- We utilize multiple social media platforms to communicate these messages, taking into account the multiple streams of information used to find factual information about migration. All digital ads are compatible with mobile devices, as data shows mobile is the dominant source of media consumption in the region.
- We use the same means to share with audiences in those four countries the U.S. commitment and actions to generate economic opportunities, improve economic well-being, and combat corruption.
- Radio ad scripts are derived from real-life testimonials.
- Since January 2021, we have run an estimated 28K radio ads in Brazil, El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras in Spanish, Portuguese, and six indigenous languages. The current Central America radio campaign includes nationwide coverage in all regions, including both urban hubs and targeted rural areas where migrants are more likely to come from.
- These ads played on 133 radio stations, reaching at least 7 million Central American radio listeners and potentially as many as 22.8 million listeners each month. From October 2019 to December 2020, we ran an estimated 7,500 radio ads per month on 30 radio stations in El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras. Radio impressions data is pulled from listenership estimates, meaning the potential reach numbers indicated are likely significantly lower than the actual number of listeners reached.
- The Department takes a data-informed approach to deploying digital and traditional modes of advertising. We use message testing and audience research to make content more engaging and persuasive to target audiences, including potential irregular migrants. This data-driven approach allows the Department to communicate in complex information environments overseas to reach target audiences with credible, resonant messages, on platforms they use, and at times these audiences are most engaged.

Hello,

I'm an immigration reporter at CNN. I'm reaching out regarding the digital and radio ads released in Latin America to discourage migration to the US southern border.

White House press secretary Jen Psaki said the US, via the State Department, had placed approximately 17,118 radio ads in Brazil, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras since January 21 in Spanish, Portuguese and six indigenous languages. She also said the State Department worked with Facebook and Instagram on an advertising campaign.

Can you share examples of those ads?

Thanks, Jim. They approved the request for me to speak with you under the ground rules we discussed -- you can use the info I provide, but with no attribution to me, the Global Engagement Center, or State Department. Glad to do other conversations in the future, as your research progresses. It's a very interesting area.

Based on the 1975 mention of ethnic weapons you found, sourced to Richard Hammerschlag, I found a similar 1974 media mention of him and the theoretical "ethnic weapon" (attached). In this UPI article, Hammerschlag says he heard about the concept at a 1973 conference in Tokyo and then found the 1970 Military Review article by Larson, which, as best I can tell, was the original impetus for spreading the idea more broadly, which later resulted in a SOV disinformation campaign, as described in the chapter I wrote on this subject in the 1988 USIA report. I suspect that when Shively heard about the "ethnic weapon" idea in NYC in the early 1980s, it most likely was from SOV disinformation in a US Communist Party publication read by him or an American who repeated this false claim to him or perhaps it was repeated in other far-left US pubs, which he or friends read. I think this is much more likely venue for the idea to reach him than the way Hammerschlag learned about it -- at an international scientific conference.

This is very interesting detective work. The more you immerse yourself in this topic, the more evidence I find of: 1) the original idea for many disinfo claims originating spontaneously in US or other Western [on non-Western] circles, which the SOVs monitor, subsequently picking up, adapting, and spreading allegations they find congenial through their info networks (TASS, Novosti, Radio Moscow, and covert KGB pubs like the Patriot) and 2) the subsequent spread of SOV disinfo allegations back into the far-left US population and other segments of opinion here and abroad, which can have a multiplier effect, as in the case where Shively thinks AIDS might be an offshoot of alleged (but actually non-existent) USG research into ethnic weapons. Primal fears play a key role throughout, both in those who spontaneously come up with new conspiracy theories and in those who believe them or their later, more polished versions spread by SOV disinfo.

I worked for 10 years (1987-1996) on groundless rumors that Americans were adopting or kidnapping babies or children in Latin America and then killing them and using their organs to save the lives of their natural born children. This rumor originated as urban legend in Dec 1986, in this case in Central America, which started to spread virally as soon as it hit the press. The Cuban press soon picked up on and an Havana-based French correspondent for the French communist newspaper L'Humanite reported on it, which was noticed by the Soviets, who started to run stories about it in their domestic media and in TASS and Novosti, helping spread it around the world. The story was spreading virally anyway, but they gave it a boost through their info channels. Likely as a result, a communist in Spain wrote an entire book about this. See the attached doc I wrote on this, which was updated though May 1996 when I was shifted to another job as part of a reduction in force. There was also a US domestic version of this rumor -- the kidney theft heist, in which a guy meets a woman at a bar, often in a strange city, and is drugged and one of his kidneys is stolen. This was believed and repeated by many people in the 1980s and 1990s and perhaps even now. The international version is slightly different, adapted to local circumstances -- adoptions by rich foreigners, who sometimes even adopt children with cleft palates and other birth defects (The reasoning goes: why would they want them? It must be for some evil purpose -- perhaps organ transplants.) Both the domestic and international versions of the rumor were spurred by dramatic advances in the use of immunosuppressive drugs in the 1980s, which made organ transplants much more likely to succeed because they combated the body's natural tendency to reject a foreign organ. Ancient fears of victimization were coupled with modern technology in the rumor. A decade earlier, there was the fictional 1978 American movie Coma, in which patients at a hospital were placed into comas so that corrupt doctors could "harvest" their organs for profit. As if very highly paid transplant surgeons would need the money. So the thought was in the air. Hope this helps. I spent countless hours on the "baby parts: stories, even writing a 1994 report to the UN on this issue (one of their special rapporteurs has heard about it and was investigating). It's a classic example of mass media madness, with major pubs in France and Spain publishing a variant of the rumor (eye snatching not organ snatching), which won the most prestigious journalism prizes in both countries, as I mention in the attached overview. Crazy stuff. The Sovs just copied what people in the West were already saying and circulated it through their channels.

Hope this is of interest and helps.

Best,

What Next? Mastering Racial War

By JAMES J. DOYLE
LOS ANGELES (UPI)—A Los Angeles scientist wants it soon might be possible to develop "ethnic weapons" in a new type of selected biological warfare that would make enemy people more susceptible to certain diseases.

Dr. Richard Hammerschlag, a microbiologist at the City of Hope Medical Center, said an ethnic weapon would be bacteriological or chemical in nature and attack only races or ethnic groups with certain genetic characteristics.

"If there is the strategy of war, there is an intention of destroying members of certain nations or ethnic groups," he said.

"If enemy intelligence would kill selected persons of one race more than they would permit a threat to persons of another race."

For example, Southeast Asians have a higher genetic makeup than do Caucasians. Therefore, Southeast Asians would be susceptible to drugs which would not affect Caucasians.

The concept is based on two findings that many scientists find in several different populations. For the purpose, call them genetically "isolated" populations.

The problems are multiple forms and are called "polymorphisms." The most widely known are the blood group antigens A, B, O and Rh. They exist in different frequencies among population groups around the world.

An illustration, Hammerschlag said, would be typhoid fever which is practically absent in many American Indians but appears in a high and frequent, about 30 to 40 percent, in several population groups in Southeast Asia and throughout India.

Hammerschlag said he is always aware of the concept and is a frequent speaker at conferences to see if the possibility of "ethnic weapons" was being considered within the framework of modern warfare.

He said he found that a survey of racial genetic differences may have been carried out by the Defense Department as early as 1950.

In that year, "Ethnic Weapons" was the title of an article that appeared in Military Medicine, a U.S. Army publication. It was written by Carl Larson, the head of the department of human genetics at the University of Louisiana.

The article, Hammerschlag said, implied development of chemical agents to exploit polymorphisms that he expected in the immediate future.

Larson later told "Hammerschlag the process, if it were used, could be 'unreversible'."

The U.S. Army said it has made studies of people that awareness of ethnic differences for medical purposes only. The Army said no work is being carried out in the area of ethnic weapons.

Polymorphisms (D) polymorphisms, proteins, have been identified in human populations, and Hammerschlag said that many something he said.

The great majority of the human polymorphisms, proteins are without adverse effect on performance or survival. He said, but a few aberrant types, such as that which produces sickle-cell anemia in blacks, may cause serious clinical disorders.

This anemia, however, is said only as an example. It does not seem such a threat, compared to the possibility to make it a viable agent.

The logical extension of the concept is that the genetic weapons, possibly used to attack it, and to kill all forms of warfare, except your own. Or, perhaps, more of this, except that your own forces.

THE "BABY PARTS" MYTH: THE ANATOMY OF A RUMOR

Since 1987, a totally unfounded, horrifying rumor has swept the world press. The ghastly and totally untrue charge is that Americans – or Europeans, Canadians, or Israelis – are adopting infants or kidnapping children from Latin America or other locations, and murdering or maiming them in order to use their body parts for organ or cornea transplants. This gruesome story has been reported hundreds of times by newspapers, radio, and television stations throughout the world, has won prestigious journalism awards, and is believed by tens of millions of people, if not more.

The rumor turned deadly in Guatemala in 1994. On March 29, 1994, an American tourist, June Weinstock, was attacked by a mob that accused her of abducting a Guatemalan boy. Weinstock suffered multiple broken arms, internal injuries, and severe head injuries that have left her permanently incapacitated.

The Mythical Origins of the Rumor

The "baby parts" rumor probably arose spontaneously as an "urban legend," a false but widely believed form of modern folklore. There are many such widely repeated but totally unsubstantiated stories. For example, when microwave ovens began to be widely used, an apocryphal story began to circulate about a person who had tried to dry their wet dog in a microwave oven, only to have it explode. These word-of-mouth stories are typically said to have happened to "a friend of a friend," who can never be located because there is no factual basis for the rumor.

In the same way that fears about microwave technology led to this unfounded rumor, recent dramatic advances in organ transplantation have contributed to the "baby parts" myth. All of us may someday benefit from the gift of life that organ transplantation can provide. But the process also stirs powerful, primal anxieties. This was illustrated by the fictional 1978 American movie Coma, in which patients at a hospital were placed into comas so that corrupt doctors could "harvest" their organs for profit. The same fear of wrongful death and mutilation that formed the basis for this fictional thriller is at the root of the "baby parts" rumor.

Experts on popular myths state that the "baby parts" story is a modern adaptation of a centuries-old tale. French folklorist Veronique Campion-Vincent has written:

The baby-parts story is a new – updated and technologized – version of an immemorial fable. The core of the fable is that a group's children are being kidnapped and murdered by evil outsiders.

Child abductions in 18th century France were explained by ailing nobility who needed them for medical reasons: the leprous King needed blood baths, or a mutilated Prince needed a new arm which incompetent surgeons were trying each day to graft from a new kidnapped child.

The Rumor Breaks Into the World Press

In the modern version of this legend, individuals have reported hearing the "baby parts" rumor as far back as the early to mid-1980s, although it did not appear in the international press until January 1987, when Leonardo Villeda Bermudez, the former Secretary General of the Honduran Committee for Social Welfare, mentioned the rumor during an interview in a way that made it appear as if it was true. Mr. Villeda immediately issued a clarification stating that he had merely heard unconfirmed rumors of such activities, but by this time the rumor had been reported by a wire service and it began to circulate throughout the media worldwide, appearing in Guatemala the next month and soon afterwards in Europe.

In April 1987, the Soviet disinformation apparatus began a conscious effort to spread and embellish this unfounded rumor. On April 5, 1987, Pravda carried the three-month old Honduran story, citing the original allegations without mentioning subsequent press accounts dismissing the story. The Soviet news agency TASS replayed the story, and during 1987 and 1988 it appeared many times in the Soviet media and in pro-Soviet media worldwide. The Soviet disinformation campaign in the media ended in late 1988.

Although political motivations have been responsible for some of the more spectacular outbursts of the child organ trafficking rumor, for the most part, the rumor has been embraced and spread by well-meaning individuals who believe it out of naivete or who worry that it may be true. Tragically, the publicity these well-intentioned individuals have given the rumor by deploring a non-existent crime has inadvertently contributed to its credibility and the resultant damage it has done. At this point, the rumor has attained such currency that it appears certain to continue on the strength of its own momentum for years to come.

The Impossibility of Concealing Clandestine Organ Transplants

Health and organ transplant officials in the United States and other countries have stated emphatically that it would be impossible to successfully conceal any clandestine organ trafficking ring.

In many countries, the sale or purchase of organs for transplants is expressly forbidden by law, with stiff penalties for violators. For example, organ sales for transplant have been illegal in the United States since 1984. There are similar statutes in many other countries.

In addition to the legal and moral deterrents to organ trafficking, the technical requirements that would be involved in arranging and operating an alleged murder-for-organ-transplantation scheme are so formidable that such clandestine activities are a practical impossibility.

In order for an organ transplantation to have any chance of success, a number of sophisticated medical procedures must be conducted to determine the suitability of various organs for transplantation and to permit a match with potential recipients. In particular, correct tissue and blood typing is critical to matching donor organs and potential transplant recipients. Crossing the blood group barrier from transplant donor to recipient can result in death. An equally important consideration is histocompatibility, which measures the extent to which a donor organ and a recipient match.

The surface of all cells in the body carries proteins known as major histocompatibility complex (MHC) antigens. These proteins act as signals that identify what is uniquely self to our immune system. The importance of matching MHC antigens for transplanted organs is similar to the need to match blood types for blood transfusions. However, MHC matches are more complex, and excessive differences between a donor and a recipient will cause the recipient's immune system to attack and reject the transplanted organ. In humans, the MHC antigens are encoded by a set of linked genes, which are designated as Human Leukocyte Antigens (HLA). In transplantation, it is vital to the survival and well-being of the recipient to identify and match the donor's HLA types. This can only be accomplished in a laboratory designed to test histocompatibility, and requires individuals with specialized laboratory skills to conduct the testing.

After the organs have been extracted from a donor, an extremely delicate and complex procedure that involves a transplant surgeon and support staff including an anesthesiologist, attending surgeons, and operating room nurses, the organs must be transported as rapidly as possible, typically by helicopter or airplane, to the hospitals where the transplants will occur. Before transporting the donor organ, special preservation solutions must be infused into it. Proper insulation and temperature-controlled packaging including adequate ice or refrigeration must be used to protect the organ during shipment. Absolute sterile conditions must be maintained for the organ to remain viable for transplant.

Organ transplants must be accomplished extremely rapidly because the time that organs can survive outside the body is severely limited. Hearts must be transplanted within five hours, livers within 24 hours, pancreases within six to 12 hours, and lungs within five hours. Kidneys can survive the longest, but most surgeons will not transplant a kidney that was removed more than 48 hours ago.

Sophisticated surgical equipment and highly skilled medical personnel are necessary for a transplant to take place. At a minimum, one needs 20 individuals, including three members of a surgical team, one scrub nurse, one circulating nurse, one anesthesiologist, one perfusion technician, and one general function technician. For all transplant surgery, a large area needed for the operating table, instrument table, laboratory instruments, anesthesia equipment, monitoring equipment, spare supplies, gas sources, and personnel access.

In addition, in order to prepare for a kidney recipient's surgery, a kidney machine must be available to perform dialysis. For a heart transplant, the patient must be placed on circulatory and respiratory bypass equipment during the entire length of the transplant procedure and constantly monitored by a pulmonary technologist. During a liver transplant, bleeding is extensive because the liver produces the substance that causes blood to coagulate. Access to a blood bank is necessary because as many as 20 to 50 units of blood may be required for blood transfusions.

Thus, the daunting technical requirements of the transplant process make it impossible that transplants could occur clandestinely, as the child organ trafficking rumor alleges. Such highly complex operations could not occur at hidden, makeshift facilities. It would not be possible to assemble a team of highly trained medical professionals who would all be willing to engage in such morally repugnant criminal acts and be willing to take the enormous personal risks that would be involved in performing a transplant operation clandestinely. Nor would it be possible to arrange such a procedure for purely logistical reasons alone because the technical resources required could not be assembled outside of major medical centers.

In addition, the transplant process does not end with the completion of the transplant operation. Follow-up care of the transplant recipient is critical for short-term and long-term survival and well-being. After the transplant operation, the organ recipient must be treated by a transplant physician, a separate individual from the transplant surgeon, who monitors, medicates, and treats the transplant recipient for the rest of his life. No transplant physician would treat a person without knowing all the circumstances of their progressive organ disease, the details of their transplant operation, including the identity and health records of the donor of the organ, and a great deal of other information that would not be available if the transplant operation were performed clandestinely.

It is important to remember that transplant surgeons and physicians are highly trained professionals who are handsomely compensated for their expertise. There would be no reason for them to engage in clandestine, illegal transplantations. On the contrary, they would have every incentive not to participate in such activities. If such illegal activities were detected – and they surely would be given the large number of people involved, the highly technical nature of the procedures, and the abhorrent nature of the alleged activities – this would mean the effective end of the surgeon or physician's career, with catastrophic financial and personal implications.

In sum, organ transplantation is such an immensely complicated, highly technical, heavily regulated, extremely time-sensitive procedure, involving so many highly trained professional personnel and so much sophisticated medical equipment, that clandestine organ trafficking is, quite simply, an impossibility from a practical point of view. The charges that children are being kidnapped and murdered for such purposes make the allegations even more dubious.

Nor is there any evidence that clandestine rings exist in order to kidnap children or others in order to extract their corneas for transplant. Corneas, which are tissues, not organs, can be extracted up to 12 hours after death for use in sight-restoring transplantations. This means that if anyone wished to procure corneas illicitly, they could do so by bribing someone at a morgue to extract corneas from corpses. There is no reason for anyone to kidnap or murder children or others in order to obtain corneas.

Repeated Investigations Find No Evidence for the Rumor

In early 1987, when the "baby parts" rumor first appeared, representatives of the U.S. Justice Department, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Food and Drug Administration, the National Institutes of Health, the Department of Health and Human Services, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service all investigated their records and stated that they had no evidence that would indicate alleged organ trafficking.

On July 23, 1987, in response to a European Parliament resolution asking for an investigation of such charges, the European Community Commission stated that it “does not know of any transplant operations performed in Europe for which the organs of Latin American children have been used.”

On October 7, 1987, the Geneva-based non-governmental organization Defense for Children, International (DCI) stated, “In recent months, DCI has tried to have these reports verified by its representatives in Central America. So far, these investigations have failed to find any evidence to substantiate the reports.”

On January 29, 1988, after these charges had resurfaced in Guatemala, the Director of the Treasury Police, Mr. Oscar Augusto Diaz Urquizu, stated: “The institution which I direct has no proof, evidence or indication that Guatemalan children are being sent to the United States, or to any other country, to be dismembered and used as organ donors.”

In a July 11, 1988 report, U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar warned that reports of such activities issued by the International Association of Democratic Lawyers were “possibly fictitious,” adding that there has been no “corroboration” for them.

On August 23, 1988, Gene Pierce, Executive Director of the United Network for Organ Sharing (UNOS), stated that, “since the establishment of the Scientific Registry on October 1, 1987, UNOS has kept very detailed records on organ donors. There has been no documentation of any Latin American children under the age of 5 becoming donors in the United States.”

On August 25, 1988, Linda Sheaffer, Director of the Division of Organ Transplantation at the U.S. Public Health Service, stated that such illegal transplants would be “not only impractical but impossible.” She pointed out that some organ transplants “take up to 14 hours, none of the procedures could occur without the complete cooperation and knowledge of the hospital staff,” and “any such large scale operation would not be kept secret.”

On September 23, 1988, the Paris-based International Federation for Human Rights released a “Mission Report” on their “Investigation on Possible Trafficking in Infant Organs.” It stated, “we have not been able to find a single piece of evidence indicating that such a trafficking operation is really occurring.”

On September 26, 1988, the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation stated that “based on a review of all information available to the FBI, these charges are completely unfounded.”

On October 3, 1988, R.C. Steiner, chief of the U.S. National Central Bureau, which represents the United States in the international criminal investigative organization Interpol, said that its records “do not reflect any requests for criminal investigative assistance from either the police in the United States or the police of any foreign country concerning this matter.”

On October 8, 1988, Assistant Secretary of State Richard Schifter stated that “My government has made an exhaustive investigation of the charges and rumors related to this matter and both the U.S. Justice Department and the Federal Bureau of Investigation have concluded that they are totally groundless.”

On November 18, 1988, Guatemala's Diario de Centro America reported that Guatemalan president Cerezo had stated: "The Guatemalan government has made serious and thorough investigations on the trafficking of babies and it has been concluded that the rumors on the 'butchering' of babies are false."

On June 6, 1989, Assistant Secretary for Health James Mason and Surgeon General C. Everett Koop released a lengthy letter in which they pointed out that "the technical and medical aspects of organ transplantation make it impossible to obtain and transplant organs secretly." They stated, "The requirements of the process, including numerous highly trained professional personnel and sophisticated equipment, assure that any such activity would be detected and exposed," stressing that "removals of organs is a complex surgical procedure, performed only in hospitals, and specialized technical arrangements are needed to preserve the organs." Mason and Koop went on to point out, "Organ transplant procedures are also highly complex and must be performed in the highest level surgical facilities, most often in large hospitals affiliated with schools for the education of physicians." "Because of the nature of the technology involved," they concluded, "these activities could not be conducted in secret or makeshift facilities."

On February 7, 1991, Eduardo Mestre Sarmiento, the Permanent Representative of Colombia to the United Nations in Geneva, sent a letter to Mr. Jan Martenson, U.N. Under-Secretary General, in which he stated that the office of the Attorney General of Colombia had launched an "exhaustive" investigation of charges made by the International Association of Democratic Lawyers that children's organs from Colombia were being sold. Mr. Mestre stated that the investigation had found that the claims made by IADL were "completely unsubstantiated," adding that "the newspapers referred to as having published the news item never had knowledge of these acts."

On July 20, 1992, the Mexican newspaper Epoca published the findings of its investigation of this issue. It stated:

Doctor Arturo Dib Kuri, director of the Health Secretariat's National Transplants Register, expresses this opinion: "The possibilities of human organ and tissue trafficking are extremely remote. It would be virtually impossible to conceal a criminal organization of this magnitude."

The interviewee continues: "First, to obtain an idea of what we are saying, I need only mention that, in the entire country, there would be, at the most, 10 doctors capable of performing a transplant. In an operation of this type, such as a liver transplant, 32 persons participate in an operating room, including doctors, nurses, paramedics, and team and technical personnel; not to mention laboratory workers and the personnel required for post-operative hospitalization"

Doctor Dib Kuri also describes the conditions for preserving an organ outside the body. The medical technique for extracting a kidney is very delicate.

"It takes from 4 to 6 hours Once it is outside the donor's body, it must be kept at a temperature no lower than 4 degrees centigrade, because the organ must retain optimal oxygenation levels."

"Organs such as the heart, lung, liver, and pancreas have, at the most, a duration of 6 hours after they are extracted from the human body; and this is under preservation conditions requiring advanced technology and an infrastructure that any hospital could hardly possess."

Dib Kuri comments: "The number of persons engaged in a surgical practice of this type, and the complex hospital infrastructure that it requires, make it extremely difficult to keep this type of crime clandestine, in the event that anyone were to attempt to deal in organs."

"I can't imagine one of those 10 doctors that we have in Mexico who are capable of making a transplant becoming involved with a criminal organization engaged in such activities. These are not operations that can be performed in any old hospital."

"The recipient would not risk receiving an organ from anyone. All this is a mere rumor. I don't dare deny that there are stolen children, but it could be done for other purposes, such as prostitution; it is highly unlikely to be for the purpose of extracting and selling their organs."

On April 19, 1993, after Honduran Congresswoman Rosario Godoy de Osejo made accusations that "baby parts" trafficking was occurring in Honduras, the President of the Honduran Supreme Court, Orlando Lozano Martinez, stated: "These allegations have been coming forward for three years and we have not been able to prove anything nor find merit in them through investigation." On April 21, Honduran Attorney General Leonardo Matute Murillo stated that his office had investigated organ trafficking charges for more than one year and found nothing to support them. The spokesman for the Honduran police also stated that the police had investigated organ trafficking allegations and found them to be completely false.

On June 7, 1993, Mexico's El Financiero newspaper quoted Pablo Chapa, the director of complaints at Mexico City's attorney general's office, as stating, "I have not seen a single case where a person has been kidnapped and has later appeared with scars where his organs were taken, or his eyes were taken away. If these famous clandestine hospitals existed, we would have found out about them immediately." Dr. Arturo Dib Kuri, director of Mexico's National Registry of Transplants, stated, "I compare the rumor of stolen children whose organs are sold for transplant to a story saying that several thieves stole three [space] ships from Cape Canaveral to go to the moon."

In April 1996, French folklorist Veronique Champion-Vincent completed an extremely comprehensive 285-page study for the French Transplant Organization entitled Transplantation, Rumor, and the Media: Accounts of Organ Theft. Her voluminous and extremely thorough examination concluded unequivocally that organ theft rumors are an unfounded urban legend.

The Rumor's Adverse Impacts

The false "baby parts" rumor has done tremendous damage in a number of different ways.

Most dramatically, it led to attacks on Americans and others in Guatemala during March 1994. On March 8, a mob in a Guatemalan town burned the police station in which an American wrongly suspected of child kidnapping had been held. The mob resisted the efforts of several hundred riot police and was not quieted until army troops and armored vehicles arrived to restore order. On March 29, an American tourist, June Weinstock, was savagely beaten by a mob, which accused her of abducting a Guatemalan child. A mob surrounded the building where Weinstock was being protected by local authorities, broke in, and dragged her out after a five-hour siege. Weinstock was pelted with rocks and beaten with pieces of firewood, suffering multiple broken bones, internal injuries, and severe head injuries that caused serious, long-term damage. She remains unable to speak or walk and requires 24-hour nursing care.

In addition to assaults on Americans, Guatemalan media reported numerous attempted lynchings by angry mobs that believed that "strangers" were allegedly stealing their children. A Swiss volcanologist, a Salvadoran family visiting relatives, foreign assistance workers, backpackers, and Guatemalan citizens all reportedly suffered such attacks.

The hysteria generated by this rumor has had an adverse impact on intercountry adoptions in a number of countries, according to adoption groups. In May 1991, the Turkish government announced that it was suspending intercountry adoptions because of the rumor. Adoptions have also been suspended or hindered in Honduras, Guatemala, Brazil, Mexico, and other countries. As a result, some children who might have found loving homes remain in orphanages. At one point, the government of Bulgaria even went so far as to require prospective adoptive parents from foreign countries to sign a form stating, "I will not permit my child to be an organ donor nor allow the child to give organs or be a part of any medical experiments."

The rumor has also led to groundless, but widespread fears among parents in Latin America and elsewhere who believe that their child might be kidnapped for the purpose of organ transplantation.

Finally, the rumor is probably also causing an indirect but very real loss of life. Voluntary organ donation is a very altruistic activity, and one that can be adversely affected by any perception of impropriety or illicit behavior. Worldwide, there are long waiting lists for organ transplants that exceed donor supply and, as a result, people die every day because of the lack of sufficient donor organs. To the extent that the organ theft rumor has been believed, it has very likely decreased voluntary organ donation, and thereby caused many premature deaths.

1993: The Rumor is Given Credence in Television Documentaries

In November 1993, two hour-long television documentaries, one British/Canadian and the other French, gave credence to the "baby parts" rumor. Both programs contained numerous errors.

The British/Canadian program, The Body Parts Business, featured an interview with the family of Pedro Reggi, who had been a patient at the Montes de Oca mental institution in Argentina. In the film, it is alleged that Reggi was blinded when his corneas were forcibly removed.

A few days after the program was broadcast, Reggi and his half-brother appeared on the Argentine television program Hora Clave and retracted the allegation, stating that Reggi had lost his eyesight due to an "infection." A subsequent investigation revealed that he had suffered from "bilateral congenital cataracts" as an infant and had severe eye problems in the mid-1980s that were judged to be inoperable. He lost his eyesight due to disease.

The French program Organ Snatchers also highlighted the false Pedro Reggi claim. In addition, the French program concluded with a dramatic sequence in which a mother in Colombia claimed that after she took her young son Jeison to a hospital for diarrhea, he emerged blind because his corneas had been stolen. The blind boy, misidentified as Jenson, was shown on the pages of Life magazine in October 1993, playing a flute.

On February 4, 1994, the Colombian government's Office of Human Rights issued a report on its investigation of these allegations. It stated that Jeison had gone blind due to disease. After he was admitted to a Colombian hospital in February 1983, at four months of age, he was found to be suffering from multiple illnesses, including "severe bilateral eye infection [which] had produced perforations of the corneas, conjunctivitis, and drainage of purulent matter from each of his corneas." The prognosis was for a total loss of vision, which, according to Jeison's medical records, occurred on February 23, 1983.

In short, the "revelations" of alleged organ and cornea trafficking in both programs turned out to be groundless.

1994-1996: The Rumor Attains Unprecedented Credibility

In January 1995, Eye Snatchers, an edited version of Organ Snatchers, was broadcast on M-6, a major television station in France. Eye Snatchers repeated the allegations about the Argentine youth Pedro Reggi and the Colombian child Jeison, both of which had been decisively disproved one year earlier. It made no mention of the fact that its main alleged "smoking gun" cases of cornea theft had been disproved. It simply ignored these facts as if they had not occurred.

In May 1995, Eye Snatchers received France's prestigious Albert-Londres prize in the audio-visual department, having been voted by a panel of journalists to be the best television program of the year in France.

The Colombian government was so outraged by the award of this prestigious journalism prize to a program that falsely accused Colombian doctors of stealing eyes from living children that it flew Jeison to Paris for an examination by a team of French doctors.

Jeison and his father arrived in Paris in August 1995 and the boy was examined by three prominent French doctors: Dr. Gilles Renard, of the Ophthalmological Service of the Hotel-Dieu Hospital; Dr. Marc Gentilini, of the Infectious and Tropical Diseases branch of the Pitie-Salpetriere Hospital; and Dr. Alain Fischer, of the Pediatric Immunology Service of Necker Hospital. The report on their examination of Jeison stated unequivocally that the boy had not had his eyes or corneas stolen. It reported that a stump of the eyeball and a number of fragments of corneal tissue remained in his eye sockets, proof that the corneas and the eye had not been removed. The condition of Jeison's eyes was exactly what would have been expected as a result of the disease from which he had suffered, as recorded in his medical records.

Shortly after this report was released, the panel that had awarded the Albert-Londres prize to Eye Snatchers decided to suspend the prize, pending further investigation.

Meanwhile, on March 18, 1996, a series of articles repeating "baby parts" claims in the Brazilian newspaper Correio Braziliense was awarded the "King of Spain" prize for journalism. The articles repeated the long-disproved Jeison and Pedro Reggi charges and many other false claims that had appeared in the world press. The series' author, Ana Beatriz Magno, admitted in the March 20 issue of the Spanish newspaper El Pais that "I can only reproduce what the international press has written" on this issue and that she did not seek to verify any of the claims she had repeated.

Also on March 20, 1996, the Albert-Londres panel in France decided to reaffirm its award to Eye Snatchers, although with numerous "reservations." The panel criticized the program for having been "too categorical" in its allegations of cornea theft, which it admitted that the great majority of ophthalmologists thought were groundless, and admonished the program's producer, Marie-Monique Robin, for having "allowed herself to be carried away with emotion," for having made "unnecessarily injurious judgments," and for having been insufficiently skeptical of the claims of cornea theft. Despite these many criticisms, the panel nevertheless reaffirmed its award of the prize. Commenting on the panel's decision, the French magazine Telerama asked: "How is it possible for the Albert Londres jury to justify the award of its prize to an investigation that they themselves judge to have little reliability?"

Conclusion

Despite the fact that it is totally unfounded, the "baby parts" rumor is now perceived as fact and accepted as conventional wisdom in large parts of the world. It has generated hysteria in Central American countries, led to brutal, unprovoked attacks on Americans and others, disrupted the lives of numerous prospective adoptive parents and the children they wished to adopt, won prestigious media awards in Europe, caused major disruptions in cornea donations in Latin America, and, in all likelihood, has caused numerous premature deaths because of its adverse effects on organ donation.

This sensationalistic rumor springs from deep, irrational, but very powerful anxieties stirred by advances in the life-saving process of organ transplantation. These fears have unfortunately been fanned by some who have cynically advanced this rumor for political purposes. The false rumor has also been propagated by many others who genuinely believe it. As a result of this cycle of events, the "baby parts" myth has now attained such widespread currency that it continues to feed on itself and, tragically, is widely believed despite numerous corrective statements, authoritative statements pointing to the impossibility of such practices occurring, and the fact that despite almost ten years of searching, no government, non-governmental organization, intergovernmental body, or investigative journalist has ever produced any credible evidence to support the charges.

Subject: Opportunity for Marshall Islands Journal to join the New York Times Content Project
Date: Tue, 15 Dec 2020 19:24:27 +0000

Aloha (b)(6)

I hope you are keeping healthy and enjoying this holiday season. I am writing to you as the East-West Center is administering a project for the Department of State which provides licensing agreement to use New York Times content in select Pacific Islands newsrooms. The funds are drawn from the GEC Information Access Fund which we are accessing through a sub-award with the Institute for War and Peace Reporting. We would like to make this opportunity available to the both the Cook Islands News and Television Niue if you think that these outlets would be open to the opportunity and a worthy recipients of the license. The year-long license (valued at (b)(4)) would allow those media outlets to republish New York Times content (in both English and Mandarin languages) in their hardcopy and online presence (if any).

If you think that Cook Islands News & TV Niue would be appropriate would you be willing to make the first approach to introduce their executives to the idea? Casi Gentzel, our GEC contact at INDOPACOM, prefers that approach instead of the EWC directly reaching out, if you are willing. Myself and our contact at the New York Times will follow-up your initial query with practical details.

At the end of this email I've included some boilerplate language used by other embassies to contact media outlets. Feel free to use verbatim or customize to your circumstances.

Thanks very much for your help. Stay safe and happy holidays.

Best regards,
Scott Kroeker

My name is XXXXX and I work with the US Embassy in XXXX it's my pleasure to E-meet you.

I'd like to bring your attention to an opportunity to access content for your publication, the XXXXX.

The U.S. Embassy is offering your news outlet the opportunity to be part of our New York Times English & Mandarin content project. We know that many small and medium size news outlets would like to use content from larger outlets, and, that content in Mandarin for occasional Mandarin language supplements is also helpful.

We are pleased to announce a new project for select news outlets in the Pacific:

- 1) free usage license for New York Times English and Mandarin content for at least one year,
- 2) custom training from the New York Times on their website (so you can most easily access the content you want, and on-going technical support),
- 3) quarterly webinars with prominent international journalists on relevant topics to the Pacific facilitated by the East-West Center, and
- 4) customized training organized by the East-West Center on specific topics you deem most important to your newsroom.

We hope you will join us in this project! If you are interested, we would like to connect you with Scott Kroeker from the East-West Center, who will be organizing logistics."

Hi there. So for a story I'm doing on the new front in disinformation wars, I think the Global Engagement Center at State could be a great resource. My story is going to focus on the Russian campaign to manufacture fears of a global food shortage crisis. And the center has done some work on this recently. One recent report is here: <https://www.state.gov/disarming-disinformation/russias-disinformation-cannot-hide-its-responsibility-for-the-global-food-crisis/>

Do you have a contact there you'd recommend reaching out to? I think this could be a pretty eye opening piece because there are a lot of overlaps with the conspiracy theories about the food supply and those about vaccines and elections. Anyway, I know you're super busy. But I'd be grateful for any guidance. And hope you're doing well.

2. Brief introductions (1-2 min.) by three co-hosting ambassadors in alphabetical country name order, mirroring the order of themes discussed by panelists:
 - a. Global scope of state-sponsored disinformation (Estonian Amb. Kuusing)
 - b. Countering disinformation (EU Amb. Leinonen)
 - c. CW disinformation (U.S. Amb. Manso, hands over to moderator GEC (b)(6) (b)(6))
3. Moderator remarks, introducing panelists (2-3 min.)
4. Panelist remarks (10 min. each)
 - a. Davey Alba (NYT)
 - b. Pasi Eronen (EEAS)
 - c. Eliot Higgins (Bellingcat)
5. Moderated Q&A – questions submitted by Slido and selected by moderator (30 min.)
6. Closing remarks by moderator

OPCW CSP-26 Side Event
“Countering State-Sponsored Disinformation”

November 30, 2021 at 1PM (EST)/ 7PM (The Hague)
90 minutes - Closed Teams Meeting - No Press but recorded

1. The Global Scope of State-Sponsored Disinformation:

Davey Alba will provide an overview of the scope of state-sponsored disinformation and how countries leverage technology to spread and amplify their twisted message.

Suggested questions:

- What countries are targeted by state-sponsored disinformation? Is the phenomenon limited to more developed nations or is it more global in scope? How aware are most countries that they are targets of state-sponsored disinformation?
- In what way does state-sponsored disinformation differ from other types of disinformation? Are the levers used by states vs. non-state disinformation actors different?

2. Countering and mitigating the effects of disinformation:

Drawing from his experience at EUvsDisinfo, Pasi Eronen will discuss what states can do to detect as well as counter state-sponsored disinformation campaigns. Suggested questions:

- What are the tell-tale signs a country is being targeted by a disinformation campaign? What should people be looking for when trying to determine whether a disinformation campaign is taking place?
- How can countries mitigate the effect of state-sponsored disinformation campaigns? What can countries and international organizations do to promote truthful messages amid a sea of falsehood? What are some good, real-life models of countries that have dealt with state-sponsored disinformation successfully?

3. State-Sponsored CW Disinformation:

Eliot Higgins will delve into the specificity of state-sponsored disinformation in the chemical weapons space based on his experience at Bellingcat working on the Syrian, Skripal, and Navalny CW file. Suggested questions:

- What is specific about state-sponsored disinformation in the CW space? In what way does it differ from other areas where disinformation abounds? What patterns, if any, can be discerned in CW related disinformation?
- What can States Parties to the CWC individually and the OPCW institutionally do to identify and promote accurate CW related information?

SPEAKERS BIOS

Davey Alba – New York Times

Alba is a technology reporter for The New York Times and covers online disinformation and its global harm. She was previously a senior reporter at BuzzFeed News and wrote about artificial intelligence and tech effects on people and communities. In 2019, she won a Livingston Award for excellence in international reporting.

Pasi Eronen – EUvsDisinfo

Eronen is an international security expert at EUvsDisinfo, the flagship project of the European External Action Service's East StratCom Task Force established in 2015 to better forecast, address, and respond to disinformation campaigns affecting the European Union, its Member States, and countries in the shared neighborhood.

Eliot Higgins – Bellingcat

Higgins is a citizen journalist and founder of Bellingcat the storied open-source investigation website. He has investigated the Syrian Civil War, 2014–15 Russian military intervention in Ukraine, the downing of Malaysia Airlines Flight 17, and the poisoning of Sergei and Yulia Skripal. He has already expressed interest in participating.

Does faith have a place in mental health?

Join us on Wednesday, June 8 at 2 p.m. EDT for our webinar, “Does faith have a place in mental health?”

Our panel of leaders in this space will address the role of faith and clergy in managing urgent mental health issues with the young and society as a whole. The panel will address believers’ need to seek out faith institutions for help with their mental health, including the benefits and limitations of going that route. The session also will cover the mental health environment of various faith institutions.

The session is being offered through a collaboration between The Associated Press, The Conversation and Religion News Service.

Please register even if news may prevent you from joining. We will send a recording link to everyone who registers.

Dear friends & colleagues,

Hope you had a restful weekend.

I would like to thank you so much for your interest in this working group to help fact-checkers around the world to address harassment and threats for our work.

We have received a total of 23 submissions to join this working group. It's great to see such a high volume of interest!

I would like to suggest the below model to launch this working group.

Broader group for monitoring and evaluation

This broader group convenes on a quarterly basis to monitor and evaluate the effectiveness of IFCN's actions to help fact-checkers around the world under stress and risks due to harassment and threats. It also provides feedback to IFCN on such activities and evaluates IFCN's performance in those areas by working with IFCN on publishing quarterly "Harassment against fact-checkers" reports for verified signatories and the public.

This group will be updated on a 2/3 basis in a calendar year.

Core group for consulting and planning (group of 11)

A smaller group acts as the core group for consulting and planning by convening on a monthly basis to discuss reported harassment cases and advising IFCN with action items. This group is provided with immediate updates on every harassment case reported by the fact-checking community and asked for their guidance and input.

This group will be updated on a 2/3 basis in a calendar year.

To move forward, I'm suggesting inviting the following names to the core group considering the diversity in geography and background.

Ana Brakus | Faktograf | Croatia
Angie Holan | Politifact | United States
Barbara Whitaker | Associated Press | United States
Ellen Tordesillas | Vera Files | Phillippines
Gülin Çavuş | Teyit | Turkey
Jency Jacob | Boom | India
Maarten Schenk | Lead Stories | Belgium / United States
Pablo M. Fernandez | Chequeado | Argentina
Rabiu Alhassan | GhanaFact | Ghana
Thanos Sitistas | Elinika Hoaxes | Greece
Tijana Cvjetičanin | Raskrinkavanje | Bosnia-Herzegovina

Action items for next steps

I would like you to let me know if you approve the suggested core group by submitting this form no later than this Friday, 9th of July.

Once we have the core group formed, I'll send further information on regular calls (quarterly for the broader group and monthly for the core group) as well as communication methods to foster rapid and effective dialogue.

Please kindly note that this proposed model is not to be set in stone and will require further consultation and discussion to be a better asset for the fact-checking community. Your inputs and feedback are highly needed and appreciated! There will be more opportunities to reflect on this and improve the model on the go as we tackle future challenges and identify room for improvement!

Thank you so much!

Best-
